Woman Hypnotist Defends Powers

Can Cure Disease, Alcoholism Says Court-Banned Spell-Caster

By PETER MATTHEWS

Madame Dorothy Westlake, the Vancouver hypnotist who is said to have been hired to hypnotize a Victoria woman into returning to her divorced husband, believes most human ills can be cured by hypnotic treatment.

"I believe all disease can be controlled by the mind," she told The Times from her home at 2560 West Broadway, Vancouver, today.

Mrs. Westlake advertises herself as "Canada's leading lady hypnotist." She has set up in practice as a consultant and claims to have cured "many, many people" of alcoholism, insomnia, stuttering and all kinds of nervous disorders.

Madame Westlake, an Englishwoman, refused to discuss Friday's Supreme Court action in which 28-year-old Mrs. Helen Emma Cooper of 887 Cowper Avenue, Victoria, was granted an injunction to restrain her former husband, Thomas Amiel Cooper, and Madame Westlake from "interfering" with her.

Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson granted the injunction after Mrs. Cooper filed an affidavit stating that she was hypnotized by Madame Westlake in a room at the Empress Hotel.

"Mr. Cooper's lawyers have asked me to make no reference to this case," Madame Westlake said. "Further litigation is pending."

Speaking in a low-toned musical voice, Madame Westlake told how she first became interested in hypnotism as a young girl in England.

"I knew a number of spiritualists," she said, "and they told me I was a natural medium. From there I moved to the study of hypnosis and the more I practised it the more I am convinced it is a cure for most of the world's ills today."

"Even wars are the result of cumulative grievances in the human mind—frustrations, disappointments, feelings of insecurity, lack of recognition. . . If all the peoples of the world could be taught to think properly there would be no wars."

CURES CLAIMED
Madame Westlake came to Canada after the last war, was first in Toronto before coming to the coast. She claims to have been granted a licence by the B.C. government to practise hypnotism.

"Ninety-five per cent of human beings are hypnotic subjects," she said. "The more intelligent and imaginative, the better the subject."

"I have cured many, many people of alcoholism which is caused by emotional imbalance. The people I have cured are now happy people, able to enjoy life in moderation without any desire to drink to excess."

"I do it by planting the idea in their minds that they should not degrade their bodies in this way—and the idea sticks."

Madame Westlake says she can also remove sorrow from the minds of bereaved men and women. She says most illnesses are caused by mental disorders.

"For instance most people are told in childhood that if they get their feet wet they will catch cold. They catch cold because the idea has been planted in their minds."

"When I treat a person by hypnosis I change their thinking and make them into positive thinkers—and that is the secret of success in all walks of life."

Meanwhile, the attractive Mrs. Cooper told another Times reporter she realizes now a clever hypnotist can do almost anything with a person under certain set conditions.

Mrs. Cooper described the conditions and methods used by Mrs. Westlake to put her into a trance.

"Mrs. Westlake did everything to put me at ease and to make me feel at home and relaxed," she said. "Looking back now it seemed as if she was continually trying to put suggestions into my head."

She said on one occasion a bell boy came to the room and Mrs. Westlake offered him a drink which he refused, claiming he was suffering from ulcers and stomach trouble.

"I remember Mrs. Westlake telling the bell boy you take the drink it won't bother you," said Mrs. Cooper. The next thing the bell boy downed the drink, Mrs. Westlake laughed when he left.

Mrs. Cooper said she does not remember anything until a detective arrived and she came out of the trance. "It is a queer thing," she said. "You just don't know what has happened and your mind is all confused."

She described Mrs. Westlake as a slight woman who claimed she was 60, but looked more like 45 years old. "She isn't attractive, but is a woman who strikes you as having complete confidence in herself."

Oil Slick Studied In Hunt for Plane

Upper Campbell Lake Area Also Scoured After Loggers Report Treetops Sheared

VANCOUVER (BUP)—Samples of an oil slick found floating in British Columbia's Georgia Strait near where an RCAF T-33 jet trainer is believed to have crashed Thursday will be analyzed today to determine if it came from the jet.

Officials of the RCAF's search and rescue division began arrangements this morning for a two-quart sample of mixed seawater and oil to be analyzed by senior chemist G. C. Wilkinson of the Shell Oil Co.

Rumors of a possible crash in the Upper Campbell Lake area also were being checked today by both air and ground searches.

Reports of loggers in the vicinity hearing a "swish," and of seeing 60-foot trees with the top three or four feet broken, prompted the Campbell River Ground Observer Corps to send a party to the area on foot.

These are the last remaining clues of many reported since the search started at noon Thursday. Dense fog and cloud continued to hamper the operation, in which 500 men are taking part.

Reports Friday of an aircraft wing being sighted in water south of Campbell River proved to be false.

Aboard the plane for a routine training flight from Comox air base were FO James E. Miller, 23, formerly of Victoria, and FO Gerald Stubbs, 32, formerly of Winnipeg. Both lived at Comox with their families.

Mrs. Catherine Pilling of New Westminster was arrested after police chased a car driven by a woman dressed as a man. There were also two men in the auto.

The car was later found abandoned. Police said in it they found a .32-calibre shell, two empty shopping bags and a mask.

Mrs. Pilling is one of two persons awaiting trial for the $26,000 holdup of a Canadian Bank of Commerce branch here last November.

Vancouver Widow Gets $140,000 In Sweepstakes

The history of the Grand National and the remarkable woman who stages it are told in a special article in Weekend Magazine in this issue today.

The most fantastic finish in the history of England's famed Grand National Steeplechase today poured $56,000—every penny free of income taxes—into the pockets of Saanich shipyard worker Horace Whiteoak, 3795 Cedar Hill Road.

The Queen Mother's horse, Devon Loch, fell with victory in sight, 50 yards from the winning post. Gentle Moya, on which Mr. Whiteoak held an Irish Sweep ticket, roared from fifth place to second in the last 50 yards of the race.

The drama in the home stretch spelled the difference to the Yarrows electrician between $1,400 for an "also ran" and $56,000 in second-place winnings.

Winner of the race was E.S.B. Royal Tan was third. E.S.B.'s victory brought $140,000 in Irish Sweep money to a 43-year-old Vancouver widow, Mrs. Helen Orsloets, 3387 East 28th Ave. She is a dishwasher in Hudson's Bay Company store's staff restaurant.

Trician was one of two British Columbians and three other Canadians who won $56,000 on second-place Gentle Moya.

The others are: Lloyd Goch, 4472 Parliament Crescent, North Vancouver; G. C. Crompton, St. Catharines, Ont.; Robert Brownell, Riverside, Ont.

Clarence LeBlanc, Packton, N.B., father of nine children. No Canadians held Irish sweep tickets on Royal Tan, in third place.

Three Canadians won major prizes in the Quebec Army and Navy Sweepstakes on the Grand National—C. S. Sernatowicz, of Montreal, $18,600; A. R. Cochran, Port Arthur, $11,200, and H. Sanfilippo, 581 Fruby Street, Winnipeg, $7,500.

He didn't listen to the race broadcast from England. He went to bed—and rose—at the usual time.

He lives with his mother, Mrs. Grace Whiteoak, and his sister, Rita.

The 40-year-old Yarrows electrician was interviewed at 8 a.m.—30 minutes after the race—Mr. Whiteoak was still in a state of nervous shock, and without plans to spend his money. He was waiting by the telephone for official word from the Irish sweep headquarters in Dublin. His hands trembled as he raised a cigarette to his lips while being questioned.

A Victorian by birth, Mr. Whiteoak has bought sweep tickets "off and on" for the past 20 years. This is his first win. His ticket, CCS-18726, carried the pseudonym "Weed."

Asked of his sister's reaction to the win, Mr. Whiteoak said: "She's pretty excited about it all."

"And your mother?" "Mother's pretty excited, too," he smiled shyly. "She's not up yet," he added.

The shipyard worker went to school at the Normal when it was a model school, then attended Mount Douglas High.

In Second World War he served in the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals four years and nine months.

He has two married sisters in Victoria: Mrs. Jack Carou, 1827 Newton, and Mrs. Arthur Holland, 1845 Kings. A third sister, Mrs. William Thompson, lives in St. Andrews, N.B.

point of congratulating one another when Devon Loch fell.

Their elation turned instantly to dismay. The Queen Mother slowly lowered her glasses, turned to her daughters with a faint smile and shrugged her shoulders.

The Queen fidgeted and shook her head while the Princess repeated, "Oh, no! Oh, no!"

Georgi Malenkov, ex-premier of Russia now on a tour of British electric stations, watched the Grand National from a front-row seat about 50 yards from the Royal stand. He seldom showed any excitement during the four-mile steeplechase.

"He didn't speculate as to how he would spend the money if he won, but everyone else at the shop did. He's a very quiet chap and steady worker, popular with the other men."

The fall at the winning post by the Queen Mother's Devon Loch cost the Royal Family its first real chance to win the Grand National since the Prince of Wales' entry won 56 years ago.

The Queen, Queen Mother and Princess Margaret were on the

IN SERIOUS CONDITION

Boy Badly Injured In Fall From Bus

LAKE COWICHAN — Condition of an eight-year-old boy who fell from a school bus two miles west of here Friday afternoon was reported today as "still serious."

Bobby Gunderson, Honeymoon Bay, suffered extensive skull fractures when he and a companion, Billy Janky, eight, also of Honeymoon Bay, were thrown from the bus on South Shore road while being taken home from school.

Young Gunderson is in King's Daughter's Hospital in Duncan, and the other boy is being treated for shock at his home.

NEAR DOOR
The two boys were sitting beside the emergency door when it opened.

"The case is still under investigation," said Cpl. Don Thompson, RCMP. "It has not yet been established how the door came open."

Driver of the bus was William Budd, regular driver for Lake Cowichan School District 66. The bus was not traveling fast when the accident occurred, police said.

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION?

By AB KENT and IRVING STRICKLAND

What is your choice of the best movie, actor and actress of the year?

Julius Rosenkranz, sales representative, 810 East Denny Way, Seattle: "I think 'Marty' was the best movie, the same as Academy Award judges picked. But in my opinion, Frank Sinatra was the best actor for his role in 'The Man With The Golden Arm.' Kim Novak, also in 'Golden Arm,' was the best actress."

McBride, Mrs. R. C. McBride, sales clerk, 1912 Oak Bay: "I liked 'Mr. Roberts,' but I think Susan Hayward should have got the best actress award for her part in 'I'll Cry Tomorrow.' I was quite satisfied with the choice for the best actor—Ernest Borgnine, who starred in 'Marty.'"

Wally Cutt, garage attendant, 5305 Parker: "I'll Cry Tomorrow" was, I think, the best movie I saw. Susan Hayward was very excellent in that. James Stewart is my favorite actor. He's good in every film."

Cutt, Johnny Field, sales representative, 1781 Hampshire: "Jack Palance, I thought, was very good in the role of Attila in 'Attila the Hun.' Frank Sinatra should have had a higher rating for his part in 'The Man With The Golden Arm.'"

Mrs. Margaret Dewdney, teacher, 1337 Rockland: "I did think 'Marty' was the best movie I saw, with Ernest Borgnine the best actor. Julie Harris was very good in 'I Am a Camera.'"

Dewdney, Brian Carver, student, 918 Gorge West: "I liked 'Rebel Without a Cause,' and James Dean, the star, was pretty good. I don't go for actresses very much."

Two Men Injured In Douglas Crash

Ronald F. Ward, 34, 820 Metchoin, and Fred Waller, 39, 813 Metchoin, were treated at hospital for slight injuries received in a two-car accident at Douglas and Superior at about 12:30 a.m. today.

Police said Mr. Ward was driving south on Douglas when in collision with a car driven by George L. Tahouney, 19, 122 Niagara.

The Tahouney auto was proceeding east on Superior and making a left turn when the accident occurred.

Malenkov Sees Classic At Aintree

Makes No Move To Meet Queen

AINTREE, Eng. (UP)—Former Soviet Premier Georgi Malenkov and Queen Elizabeth went to the races today but they did not meet.

Both Malenkov and the British monarch watched Britain's Grand National sweepstakes—but from different stands.

Malenkov is no longer a head of state and therefore rated no official reception from the Queen in London.

Some had thought there were prospects of a chance encounter, since the Queen often mixes with invited guests at the annual steeplechase classic. Malenkov was a guest of the race course owner.

EMBARRASSING It had been feared that a chance meeting of Malenkov and the Queen would be somewhat embarrassing for the young monarch and that an unsolicited visit to the Royal box would be sure to touch off a storm in newspapers already critical of Britain's rash of Soviet visitors.

In London, unidentified anti-Communists succeeded Friday night in infiltrating the Russian British cordon around the Soviet embassy, where Russian police chief Serov is staying, and littered the lawn with anti-Red propaganda leaflets.

A British private watchman stationed nearby said the "propaganda raiders" made good their escape.

90-MAN GUARD Prime Minister Anthony Eden's government went out of its way Friday night to assure irritated Britons that Serov will not be allowed to bring in "a mob of Soviet gunmen" to protect his bosses.

Scotland Yard sources said the secret police chief has agreed that "only 90 men"—40 Russians and 50 Britons—will be a sufficient bodyguard for Khrushchev and Bulganin. That is nearly five times as many as the 20 men Britain had planned to assign to the task.

Britons are also speculating on just how good is the sleek Russian jet airliner that brought Russia's security chief to London.

"It may certainly be a good Russian product, but I don't think it a very good airplane," Peter Masfield, former chief executive of British European Airways, told a transport institution dinner Friday night.

"It would hardly pass muster in shipyards around here for its riveting," Masfield said.

The News Chronicle, saying newspaper writers praised the plane for making a "perfect three-point landing," comments: "What on earth was it expected to do, fall flat on its nose?"

MARIE DIONNE PLANS TO OPEN FLOWER SHOP

MONTREAL (BUP)—Marie Dionne, one of the surviving quintuplets who left a convent last November because of ill-health, plans to open a flower shop May 1, The Star reported today.

Marie could not be reached immediately for comment on the report. The newspaper said the shop, to be located on Pine Avenue, would be called "Le Salon Marie Dionne." She will be sole owner but a local businessman will be her adviser.

Marie has been living with her quintuplet sisters, Cecile, Annette and Yvonne, in an apartment since she left the convent in Quebec City, except for a brief New Year's visit to the family home at Callander, Ont.

OVER CHANGE IN NAME

Mine, Mill Loses Rights in Ontario

TORONTO (CP)—The 33,000-member International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Canada) Ind. today lost its bargaining rights in Ontario.

In a unanimous decision, the province's five-man labor relations board ruled that because of a recent change in the union's name it is not the same organization as previously held bargaining rights.

The Communist-led union at its last convention approved a new constitution embodying basic changes and a new name in a move to give the Canadian section greater "autonomy."

The word "Canada" in brackets was added to the name. Opponents of the union—said to be the biggest Communist-dominated union in Canada—said the newly named organization is not the same as the one that held bargaining rights under the old name.

In an 18-page decision board chairman Jacob Finkelman upheld the argument that the union thereby changed its identity. His ruling, endorsed by both company and union representatives on the board, in effect leaves the union's contracts in jeopardy.

Contracts negotiated under the new name, however, were still good. They affect about 200 employees.

The union holds contracts in uranium, nickel, steel and gold mines in Ontario.

The decision paves the way for a union battle between Mine-Mill and The United Steelworkers Union CIO, to which the Canadian Congress of Labor granted "the left-wing union's jurisdiction five years ago when Mine-Mill was expelled from the CIO and the Canadian Congress of Labor, for following the Communist party line.

The cornerstone of Mine-Mill's bargaining power in the east is the huge International Nickel Company's operations in the Sudbury district and in Port Colborne.

Its largest locals in the west are in the plants of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company at Trail and Kimberley.

Observers said today's decision does not mean Mine-Mill will be "outlawed" but only that its status as a trade union under Ontario's labor code is not recognized by the board.

Companies which hold contracts with Mine-Mill can continue to honor them, but rival unions can step in any time to contest the left-wing union.

To regain its position, the union must resign a majority of workers at each of the plants and apply again for certification from the labor board under the new organization that was set up by the convention. During that process it will be open to "raids" from rivals.

Six Flee Fire In Early Hours At Prince Rupert

Unknown Rescuer Sounds Alarm

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. (CP)—Six persons, including a four-month-old baby, escaped a $150,000 fire that destroyed two stores, four apartments and an office in this northern British Columbia coast city early today.

No one was injured but all six residents lost all their belongings except the clothes they wore.

The city clerk's office said the block and contents were valued at more than $150,000.

Flames licked 100 feet into the air at one time, said Fire Chief Earl Becker. The unknown blaze broke out at 2 a.m. and was not extinguished for four hours.

An unknown rescuer hammered on the door of Mr. and Mrs. Clark McLean to tell them the building was on fire. The couple only had time to dress before choking smoke drove them out.

They rushed to the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Winslow and their four-month-old son Denny. The Winslows had no time to dress but bundled the baby into a car and fled.

The fire in the Stone block left a blackened shell. Wiped out were a footwear shop, a man's wear store, an accountant's office and the apartments.

Two offices of the federal fisheries department suffered smoke and water damage. John Stokes, fisheries biologist, said files, microscopes and other equipment were not damaged.

H. J. Dominato, proprietor of Fashion Footwear Ltd. estimated his loss at $30,000.

William F. Stone, owner of the men's store, is believed to be returning from Kitimat where he moved Thursday.

Law Clerk Dies in After-Party Fall; Newsman, Cameraman Beaten

TORONTO (CP)—A law society clerk was killed early today when he toppled over a steel railing and plunged 25 feet down a stairwell after a lawyers' reunion party at Osgoode Hall.

The victim was Herbert Attwood, about 40, of Toronto, a clerk in the Upper Canada Law Society offices.

Police said Mr. Attwood was descending the stairs when he suddenly slumped over the railing and fell 1 1/2 storeys to the concrete basement floor.

The party was for members of the 1950 graduating class at Osgoode, downtown home of the Law Society of Upper Canada, which controls legal education in Ontario. The hall also contains the judges' chambers and law courts of the province.

The party was held in a big third-floor hall. David Humphrey, a member of the 1950 class, saw the accident.

"He just slipped," Mr. Humphrey said. "It was just like a scene from a movie. There was no sound, I dashed down the stairs and called for someone to get a doctor. Then I felt for his pulse. There was no pulse."

Two newspaper men said they were set upon as they were walking in front of Osgoode Hall just after the accident.

Reporter Andrew MacFarlane and photographer Geoffrey Fraser, both of The Telegram, said about six men jumped them. Police broke up the fracas.

Mr. MacFarlane said that when he walked up to a group of men, one of them asked: "Are you a reporter?" Mr. MacFarlane said he replied "Yes," and was attacked. The photographer said his camera was smashed.

Telegram publisher John Bassett, Jr., said legal action will be taken against the lawyers who

Opposition Leaders Tee Off on Budget

(From Times News Services)

Election talk was in the air Friday as the opposition parties opened fire on the new federal budget with two non-confidence motions against the government.

Progressive Conservative spokesman J. M. Macdonnell termed it "an empty budget" paying the way for big tax cuts just before an election next year.

He presented a non-confidence motion saying the budget is "empty, negative and partisan," and shows no concern about distressed areas in Canada or growing United States domination of Canadian industry.

CCF leader Coldwell even speculated on the election date—June 17, 1957—and said the budget is designed to mark time until then. Next year's pre-election budget would be "very promising."

His party's want-of-confidence motion, amending the Conservative one, called for a tax on capital gains and elimination of the 20-per-cent tax credits for income from Canadian company dividends. Present policies continued to favor "privileged interests and those with unearned income." It also said the budget "failed" to reduce sales and income taxes for taxpayers in the lower income groups.

John Blackmore (SC-Lethbridge) argued for adoption of the Social Credit financial theory of creating money to match the country's production. The budget was "utterly inadequate" on that count. The spokesman for the three opposition parties teed off the debate on the budget presented Tuesday night by Finance Minister Harris.

Colin Cameron (CCF, Nanaimo) said labor income increased by 7 per cent in Canada last year while investment income was up 20 per cent. Tax exemptions allowed on investment income were "scandalous."

Canadian corporations had held $913,000,000 in undistributed profits last year and also "tucked away" $206,000,000 in depreciation allowances. Both these sums were non-taxable.

Magazine Tax Draws Criticism

Publisher of oil periodicals, Carl Nickle said Friday the proposed 20 per cent federal tax on the advertising profits of Canadian editions of foreign magazines is inequitable, dishonest, discriminatory and wrong and dangerous in principle.

"If I could not successfully compete by fair means, I would sooner go out of business than resort to demands that my competitors have their wings clipped by extraordinary taxes," the Calgary South Progressive Conservative said.

Earlier, CCF leader Coldwell said he is in complete sympathy with the objective of the tax announced in last Tuesday's budget. However, he agreed with Mr. Nickle that it is doubtful the tax will stop special Canadian editions of United States magazines.

Starting next Jan. 1, the tax would be levied on the gross advertising revenues of Canadian editions of foreign periodicals—those which contain advertisements not printed in the magazine's home edition.

CCF Again Hits Loan Companies

The CCF for the second time this week moved Friday to prevent parliamentary action sought by small loan companies.

Claude Ellis (CCF-Regina City) proposed that a bill seeking incorporation of Signature Loan and Finance Co. be given a six-month hoist—a technical device that would kill it for this session.

Last Tuesday, CCF leader Coldwell put a similar motion on a bill to change the name of Personal Finance Co. to Beneficial Finance Co.

Debate was adjourned on both motions before a vote could be taken.

Mr. Ellis said 83 per cent of the small loan business in Canada is controlled by "two large United States corporations. They have made profits last year totaling $4,800,000, "which has been drained off to the U.S."

R. R. Knight (CCF-Saskatoon) said small loans companies should be required to state in their advertising that they charge 24 per cent interest per annum.

The federal budget surplus climbed by $8,393,000 in February to an 11-month total of $187,889,000.

But Finance Minister Harris was still convinced Friday that the over-all surplus will turn into a deficit of $51,700,000 when the books are closed for the full year's operations.

His forecast of a $51,700,000 deficit was contained in a white paper tabled before he brought down his 1956-57 budget last Tuesday.

In March, final month of the fiscal year, expenditures normally exceed revenues by a substantial amount. Mr. Harris said in his monthly treasury statement. And therefore he expects the $51,700,000 deficit to materialize.

The February $8,400,000 surplus contrasted with the $19,900,000 deficit a year ago. The $187,889,000 surplus for the 11 months of 1955-56 compared with a $103,200,000 deficit in the similar 1954-55 period. But in 1954-55, the government ended up in the red by $151,800,000.

Sentence Monday On Gas Theft, Liquor Charge

An 18-year-old youth will be sentenced in Saanich police court Monday on charges of theft of gasoline under $50 value, and being a minor in possession of liquor.

Robert John Richardson, 2923 Dwyer, pleaded guilty to both charges Thursday and was remanded in custody for sentence.

He also pleaded guilty in city court Friday to another charge of possessing liquor. Sentence on that charge will also be imposed Monday.

PRIVATE PUMP

Saanich police said Richardson and a juvenile were apprehended stealing gasoline from a private gas pump, owned by Frederick Rudd.

The younger boy is being dealt with in juvenile court.

To the charge of being a minor in possession of liquor, Richardson admitted sharing the cost of one and one-half dozen bottles of beer, court was told.

City police found a partly-consumed case of beer in his car on March 15, which led to the second possession charge.

$400,000 EXPANSION AT CITY MILL

75 More Men To Be Hired

A $400,000 plant expansion, and installation of equipment which will employ 75 additional workers, at B.C. Forest Products plywood plant was announced Friday.

Company president H. G. Munro said work will begin immediately. Completion is expected in July.

Construction will provide 7,500 square feet of floor space for a dryer, and 9,600 square feet for a specialty department.

Mr. Munro said the new installations will not alter the consumption of logs by the plant, but will permit finishing of more products which are now marketed unfinished.

1,050 WORKERS
The project will bring the company's total employment in Victoria plywood plant and Victoria sawmill division to about 1,050 men with an annual payroll of $3,800,000.

"It is another phase of the company's long-range employment stabilization program to a policy of complete utilization and maximum manufacture towards final use," said Mr. Munro.

"In addition," he added, "the company considers Victoria a good place to live with its ideal climate, its personnel potential, its proximity to company timber holdings and the good labor-management relations which have been enjoyed."

Young City Mother 'Not Guilty' Of Abducting Her Own Youngster

An all-male jury Friday returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of Mrs. Selby E. Galley, 20, following a two-day trial in Assize Court on a charge of abducting her two-year-old boy.

The jury deliberated for two hours. Mrs. Galley was accused of unlawfully detaining William Robert Galley, who was committed to the Children's Aid Society on the alleged grounds of "neglect and the lack of parental care."

The order committing the child to welfare officials was made by Judge J. A. Byers following a judicial inquiry into the child's case last November.

The mother, who is expecting a third child, told the court between sobs she had no knowledge of the existence of a court order committing her boy to the society.

She said she thought the society had taken the boy, "Butch," until she could find a home for him, but became worried when she heard rumors about attempts to adopt the boy.

"I took him because he belongs to me," she said tearfully.

The Crown's evidence was that a social worker, William Scoones, took the child to visit Mrs. Galley on her request on January 17 at 623 Queens, where the mother was living.

SCOTS MARK ANNIVERSARY HERE TONIGHT

Forty years ago today the 67th Western Scots, 1200 strong, marched through downtown Victoria to the Belleville Street docks, where they embarked on three CPR steamers for Vancouver, the first leg on their journey overseas.

Tonight at Loughheed's banquet hall, between 60 and 70 greying men, all who can be present out of the 200 known to be still living, will sit down and celebrate that memorable event.

They will come from Up-Island, Vancouver, other points on the mainland and a few from the United States.

Mr. Scoones did not see the child again until the boy's whereabouts was discovered on February 17.

Mrs. Galley said when Scoones brought the child to her house she took him into the kitchen, and left him near a basement door for five minutes. She said Scoones then asked her about the boy and she said he was "gone."

Scoones, she said, told her she was kidnapping him, but she replied she was not, Mrs. Galley testified.

She said from then until February 17 when the child was recovered by welfare officials, the child was with her and was often down town with her.

Mrs. Galley said she found a home for the boy, but claimed welfare officials were reluctant to let her see him.

She admitted she was living with a man who was not her husband.

Her husband was in Quebec, she said, and was an alcoholic and had deserted her.

NEWS BRIEFS

City Hall has had a special request from a 13-year-old Hereford, England, boy seeking pen pals.

Garry Mitchell, Swan Hotel, Hay-on-Wye, Hereford, also asks for used Canadian stamps to round out his collection.

Erection of a sign at the CPR dock to advise visitors of the Sunset Ceremony outside the Parliament Buildings in summer was suggested by J. Courtney Haddock at a meeting of Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors Friday.

R. B. Wilson of Acme Finance Ltd., formerly head of Wilson Motors Ltd., was admitted to membership of Victoria Chamber of Commerce at its monthly directors' meeting Friday.

Mr. Wilson sold Wilson Motors recently to Newell Morrison, one of his former employees.

Defence counsel Herbert L. Matthews claimed the custody order was signed by the city and welfare officials, but not by the mother.

The lawyer further told the jury that Mrs. Galley believed the Children's Aid Society was only "caring for the children" and took the child in the belief that it was her legal right.

Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson in summing up the case said no conviction could be recorded if it was determined that Mrs. Galley thought she had a claim in good faith when she took the child.

Bad Business

THE GOVERNOR OF MARYLAND has wisely vetoed a piece of legislation designed for the sole purpose of discriminating against Canadian business.

Under the bill passed by the state legislature a Canadian brewing company would be prohibited from building a brewery in Maryland. Similar bills are pending in New York, Pennsylvania, Arizona and Rhode Island. Though they vary in detail, all provide that breweries in those states must be built by American capital.

Whether it is desirable to expand the brewing industry is a matter of opinion. But whatever one may think about beer, the folly of the proposed state legislation is obvious. For if the states can suppress Canadian enterprise in the brewing industry they will find means of suppressing it in other industries.

The issue thus raised is so grave that the Eisenhower Government has warned the states to think again.

In a letter to the governor of Maryland the state department says that the state beer legislation is "likely to have an unfortunate impact upon this country's foreign relations, (i.e. its relations with Canada). In our judgment the proposed legislation would discriminate against foreign enterprises. We understand this would affect particularly Canadian interests. In this connection it is important to note that Canada admits U.S. investment freely at the present time and welcomes it."

"There is," the statement adds bluntly, "some opposition to U.S. investment among certain elements in Canada and an unfriendly attitude toward Canadian investments could easily stimulate greater hostility toward American enterprise in Canada."

In other words, two can play the game of restriction. As Barron's, the influential business weekly of New York, remarks, the Maryland plan "threatens to damage U.S.-Canadian relations, penalize the hapless consumer and establish a most unpalatable precedent of special business privilege."

The governor of Maryland has wisely listened to this advice and over-ruled his legislature. The restrictive legislation thus vetoed cannot be re-introduced for another year. Meanwhile four other states are considering the same sort of policy.

If they enforce it they may be sure, as the American Government warns them, that they will encourage reprisals in Canada against American investment.

In this kind of dog-eat-dog process a few privileged corporations may benefit locally. The consumer must suffer from the restraint of price competition. More important, the flow of business between Canada and the United States must be reduced. Still more important, the historic friendship of the two nations must be damaged.

For these reasons it is to be hoped that the legislatures or the governors of Pennsylvania, Arizona, New York and Rhode Island accept the state department's advice and desist from an unwarranted, discriminatory attack on Canadian business.

The Trouble Can Spread

THIS WEEK'S RIOTING IN NICOSIA, Cyprus, lends emphasis to one of the factors on which Britain is basing its present policy. It was the first time the hitherto quiet Turkish population had been involved in the disorders. Up to now it has been Greeks versus British. The outbreak of Turkish violence, directed at the Greeks, indicates that the Cypriot minority element is becoming impatient, perhaps fearful, of the outcome of the current disturbance.

Britain has obligations to the Turks on Cyprus—approximately one-fifth of the island's population. She likewise has close ties with Turkey, and cannot afford to endanger them by abandonment of her wards in the Crown colony. Greek treatment of Turkish minorities in other areas—for instance in Crete, the Dodecanese Islands and Thrace—leaves little doubt as to what would happen in Cyprus if the opportunity arose.

In refusing to turn the island over to Greece by allowing the Greek Cypriots complete political freedom, Britain has its own defensive interests at heart. Loss of control in Cyprus would deprive Britain of a vitally needed base in the Eastern Mediterranean.

But the considerations are more than local. By angering Greece Britain endangers the Mediterranean arm of NATO. On the other hand Turkey is also an important military ally, perhaps more strategically placed if it came to a showdown.

Action on the Bridge

EARLY NEXT MONTH PROPERTY owners of Victoria will be asked to give formal approval to the construction of a new Point Ellice bridge.

The question is being put before them in a specific plebiscite form. In effect the people will be told that the city has on hand, or in sight, the funds required for the job and wants the owners of property to show their readiness to make the expenditure. A three-fifths majority will be required to pass the plebiscite.

In this way Mayor Percy Scourrah

More Support Needed

THE ORGANIZATIONAL MEETING of the Victoria Voters' Association last Wednesday attracted only 30 supporters. Inasmuch as this is a group designed to stimulate public interest in civic affairs it is to be hoped that further encouragement will be forthcoming.

There are other pitfalls, of course besides apathy. Too often such organizations become swamped by factions with a particular axe to grind, and the initial broad purposes of the group are lost. Such a body must not, as its founders warn, become a mere pressure group seeking to impose its will on the City Council. If it can stimulate discussion of public affairs, draw increased attention to city government and help citizens to form opinions on current questions of policy, then a group such as the Voters' Association can perform a valuable service to the community.

To achieve its objectives, however, it must embrace a wide membership, a cross-section of local interests. If the new organization can attract such support it should prove a worthy adjunct to the life of the city.

As Our Readers See It

Airs Criticism

I wonder if someone should not recall to Mr. Gagliardi's mind the condemnation expressed by the government of which he was and is a part, of the misuse of public transportation by the civil servants. Of course this occurred in the days when Social Credit was fresh and unsoiled. But is there a double standard within the government?

Surely if a minister can be excused for using an airplane to transport his family, or to enable him to meet his friends and family, a civil servant could be forgiven the use of a car for similar purposes.

Fears New Step

Within a few days the ratepayers of Victoria will be voting on Point Ellice Bridge by-law and it appears to me we're heading into another muddle like the arena project.

We're starting a job without adequate funds to complete it, and then have a second try to get more.

To raise this bridge 12 feet higher than the existing bridge and put in proper approaches is a million dollar job anyway.

Further, the public have not yet been enlightened as to the condition of the present bridge apart from our city engineer stating it would take $50,000 to put a new deck on.

A report on the condition of the existing bridge should be made public, and let's take heed of what's been said by the architects institute or we'll be having another monstrosity on our hands. Best to vote No.

Beautification

Re late suggestion of laying out so many million dollars for the purpose of beautifying the city of Victoria. I now read in your issue of March 21, "New Business Centre to Cost $15 Million" (in large type), and in smaller type, "Former Pearce Estate Site of New Project."

Well, well, if that is not incongruous I don't know what is. Is that the idea of beautifying, building a number of ugly shops, instead of turning the grounds into beautiful flower gardens?

Napoleon once remarked that the British were a nation of shopkeepers. I wonder what he would have said of Victoria? They don't seem to be able to get away from the almighty dollar. It does indeed make one feel sad. Sic transit gloria mundi.

RESIDENT.

Adjudicators

After reading in The Times, March 21, "Festival treats missed by many," "Evening concerts not getting the support they merit." I attended the evening concert, and I would like to tell you, that if that is a sample of the "highly trained adjudicator's" work, I want no more of it.

I was under the impression that the work of adjudicators was to encourage, not discourage, the performers, but after the cruel way and nasty remarks made in reference to the last choir which performed, I began to wonder how many years the festival will go on.

People do not travel many weary miles to be insulted. One could expect an encouraging word of their work, it does not cost anything.

Diet and Teeth

Having read a great deal on the fluoridation of water, both for and against it, I hope sincerely that this plan will not be carried out in Victoria. There are several good reasons why the citizens should vote against it. For one thing sodium fluoride only protects from decay, children's teeth during the years in which their permanent teeth develop. When a child is about 12 years of age this protection ceases.

A more effective plan would be to give the children a daily pill or tablet of sodium fluoride in their drinking water, and these can be had from any reliable pharmacy, or by means of a doctor's prescription. So why subject the taxpayer to enormous expense for the sodium fluoride, and extra for the salaries of expert chemists for the hourly supervision of the amount of the sodium fluoride to be added to the water—a job that would require very responsible personnel.

Fluorides are poisonous; at least those that are soluble in water are, but a good and safe substitute is insoluble calcium fluoride, which is present in bone meal, and can be taken with salt with absolutely no danger of poisoning, according to Dr. W. A. Costain, a leading Toronto doctor. A small amount of this taken at meals would assure a small degree of absorption of the fluoride.

Of course, if parents could so control their children that they had oatmeal porridge for breakfast, plenty of milk, and instead of candies and soft drinks, plenty of apples, then the youngsters would develop strong, healthy teeth. It could be done.

British Debts

Does Ellen Hart know that Sir Winston Churchill who has a certain amount of fair-mindedness (perhaps because he is half American) once declared in the House that never before in the whole course of history had a country given so generously of its wealth and efforts to help other countries as the United States has done.

He admitted that it hadn't been for the huge sums given her by the United States, England would have been bankrupt long ago. A stupid thing for the United States to do if her aim is to push Britain aside.

Indeed, the United States has given so much to the whole world in order to bolster up and strengthen the different countries that she is now in the red to the amount of several hundreds of billions—a debt it sees no hope of clearing before the end of the world.

WEAKNESS IN THE STALEMATE

By JOSEPH ALSOP

On Leaving Washington for the Middle East

DEAR STEW: I leave tomorrow for two months and a half in the Middle East; and so, as our custom is, I want to try to sum up how things look to me on the eve of my departure. May be advancing years are making me a bit obsessive, but in my opinion every other feature of the national scene pales into the dimmest insignificance when compared to our foreign and defence problems. Of course it's important that the country is prosperous. Of course it's important that a new kind of enlightened conservatism has taken root among us. Of course it's important that we have in Eisenhower that very unusual being, a leader who is loved.

But the whole smiling prospect of present-day America can prove and will prove to be an empty and dangerous delusion, if the cause of freedom in the world is not upheld. You may be shocked when I say so; yet it seems to me that our present situation has more than a flavor of the situation in Britain in the late '30s.

Balance of Power

Britain was prosperous then, remember. The Conservative governments of Baldwin and Chamberlain commanded immense majorities. The opposition was feeble and feeble, as I'm afraid I think the Democrats have been these last three years. None but a very few, who were thought to be "merchants of gloom and doom," were worried about the way the whole European balance of power was turning against Britain.

And then this vast shift in the power balance produced its inevitable effect; and all that had seemed so good and hopeful proved to be ruinous and wrong.

I am not comparing the Eisenhower administration to the Baldwin and Chamberlain governments. The personalities and outlooks could hardly be more different. But I am suggesting that in the midst of our prosperity, and perhaps because of our prosperity, we are passively assenting to the same kind of vast, unfavorable shift in the world balance of power that finally brought Britain to ruin.

As the supreme example of this neglect, I would cite the change that is now going on in the status of the American Strategic Air Command.

This single force, I need hardly point out, is the sole shield and buckler of the free world. It is the central, basic instrument of the defence of the United States. It is what Secretary of State Dulles had in mind in his remarks about "massive retaliation"; and it is what Secretary of Defence Wilson and President Eisenhower have in mind now, when they talk about "atomic stalemate."

Most Important

You and I have already written so much about the impairment of the Strategic Air Command's striking power that a good many people who are kind enough to read our stuff are beginning, I'm afraid, to be thoroughly bored by the whole subject. But I hope that you will go on writing about it, all the same, for the very good reason that no subject is more important.

For what, in essence, is the present American policy? The present policy is to tolerate a situation in which about two-thirds of SAC's total striking force is dependent upon overseas air bases. The policy is to tolerate this dependency although those SAC air bases are beginning to be hopelessly vulnerable, both strategically and politically, because of the Soviet jet bomber and ballistic missile programs.

The present policy, in short, is to pretend that the new power the Soviets are gaining just isn't there, or that they won't use this new power anyway.

The arguments that the Soviets won't use their new power, which they are spending billions to acquire, are just about as logically convincing as the arguments that made Pearl Harbor a catastrophic surprise. And even if the Soviets do not use their new power, SAC's vulnerability will still be a hard fact. With two-thirds of SAC's striking force in danger of being neutralized any fine morning, it is misleading and mischievous to talk about "stalemate."

No Stalemate

When the enemy has the power to kill, and we have only the power to wound, there will be no stalemate.

The defence problem is therefore the key problem, and you will have to go on dealing with that. As to what I shall find in the Middle East, meanwhile, I follow our usual rule of keeping an open mind until one sees the facts on the spot. But I rather think I may find the kind of local reflection of a general shift in the balance of power that one also saw in Europe in the '30s.

You recall how the sort of people who are now called "uncommitted" went all out, in the '30s, to adjust their surf boards so they could ride the waves of the future. I have a notion that a lot of surf board adjustment is going on now, in the Middle East and elsewhere. I suspect, too, that it wasn't very brilliant to make such an effort, at the famous Summit meeting, to convince the Soviets and the rest of the world of our devotion to peace at any price.

In any case, I shall be looking into and trying to report on one very critical aspect of the shift in the world power balance, while you in Washington report on other aspects of the same life-and-death phenomenon, and while you report, too, I hope, on all the interesting episodes of our changing political scene. Best of luck, Joe.

WHEN WE WERE VERY YOUNG

By GUS SIVERTZ

Groceries, Jewelers---And the Brown Jug

IT WAS a great thing to live in a slow-paced age in which no one had even dreamed of the possibility of mankind blithely destroying itself by a complex system of nuclear reaction.

This horror hadn't even been foreshadowed by the lively comics of the day. Credulous folk, of which there were about the same ratio then as now, could get a delicious thrill and even predict the world's end when Halley's comet was to whizz within 45 million miles of the earth in 1910.

I may say that as far as our gang was concerned it was a dismal flop.

Neither were there any supermarkets in those pedestrian days. Instead we had some really "super" groceries which, if they lacked the glamour and glitter of today's supermarkets, had a unique atmosphere as well as an amazing assortment of conventional and exotic foods.

Centre of business activity in Victoria somewhat over 50 years ago was of course, the post office, because so many of Victoria's firms rented boxes from which proprietors or their clerks would pick up much of their mail. In fact the rows and rows of boxes formed an inner wall of the post office and a very intriguing wall it was.

Three Leaders

So the post office will be a good place from which we shall start a sort of safari of our former mercantile centres. There were three leading groceries: the Windsor, Saunders and Dixie H. Ross. Of course that is not to say that Victoria lacked any number of fine stores in the suburbs such as John's Grocery out North Ward way and MacDonald's at the Junction.

The Windsor and Saunders were splendid food purveyors but Dixie Ross's, tucked in the Government Street block between Yates and Johnson, was in a class by itself. It was possibly the finest grocery on the Pacific coast at that time—a gourmet's delight.

And Ross, Kentuckian, I believe, was a showman of no mean order. He looked sleek, smooth and a good advertisement for his fine foods.

No doubt the store would never have passed modern civic by-laws on sanitary requirements and refrigeration was unheard of but it seemed to stock everything that would appeal to the discriminating palate.

On the shelves were fascinating foreign foods in metal cans on which the labels were of metal and soldered to the body of the tin. On the counters were great rounds of cheese that had attained perfection in the slow process for which today's science has found no adequate substitute.

Boxes of dried fruits from California; woven baskets of ripe figs from Smyrna; dates from Persia and Syria beckoned the shoppers and on the floor stood open burlap bags of beans, split peas, green coffee beans, rice and other grains.

Dollar Whisky

At the back—leading out to Broad Street, I think—was the liquor department in which you might pay up to $1 for a bottle of good Scotch whisky.

As only relatively few homes were equipped with telephones shopping was either personal or by order when drivers came with deliveries.

Deliveries embraced the whole of Victoria and of course there was no "service" charge for this essential part of merchandizing. And the various grocers vied with one another in the smartness of their horses and rigs. In this aspect of his service Dixie Ross again was far out in the lead with his red-and-gold enamelled rubber-tired rigs and beautifully matched teams that trotted as proudly as though they were about the Queen's business.

Loyal Customers

One of the strange things about patronage of Victoria's grocers was the faithfulness of the customers to certain stores. For example, Mr. Johns would ride out on horseback every Thursday to take orders from customers as far away from the North Ward as Oak Bay.

And I remember riding out with George Clarke's one-horse rig from Spring Ridge to Gordon Head and Lake Hill area—a full day's journey—to drop off supplies that could be put in a two-wheeled cart.

We would have a roadside lunch somewhere near Cedar Hill while old Bess munched oats from her nosebag.

Now it isn't to be supposed that Victoria's downtown area was made up of groceries and we should have seen one of the city's most unusual characters at the post office before we started.

This would be Mr. A. E. Rogers, maker of unique and superlative chocolates—great, shapely, squishy ones—that earned him a world-wide fame.

Red Shade

Almost every day of the week Mr. Rogers would trot (I never saw him walk) down to the post office after looking in his shop door and pulling down a red shade. In his kilted-up apron he would have a dozen or so boxes of chocolate bound up as many different world centres.

He would also close up shop on days when he, assisted only by his wife, was making his exquisite creations. But anyone within five blocks of his shop could tell what was going on because of the aroma that pervaded the streets—an aroma compounded of secret flavoring, chocolate, honey, Saanich butter and pure cream!

Across the street from Rogers', on the corner of Courtenay and Government, Welles's marvelous display of cut glass, china and fine furniture drew its "carriage trade."

In the next block Bancroft's Palace of Sweets was the "poor man's Rogers" and probably one of Victoria's earliest ice cream parlors. Perhaps it shared honors with H. A. Lilley's store on Douglas in this respect.

Free Lunch

Next door was Chalonier and Miti chell's gem of a jewelry store—the Tiffany of the west coast.

The backs of the display windows were fashioned of small squares of cut glass and they threw a thousand colored rainbow-hued rays from the sputtering street-corner arc lights.

On the best corner of Fort and Government stood Meldrum and Moloney's Brown Jug saloon with a door on each street. Kids could peek in at the wonderful free lunch at the end of the long mahogany bar, presided over by a kindly white-coated Chinese—the lunch, not the bar.

Enchantment

WHAT with the Assizes going on, this column has been somewhat preoccupied with crime and punishment; civil litigation for the time being having been pushed aside by the weighty business of the Crown. So when the court takes time out, as it were, to grant an interim injunction, to a private citizen, it is obvious that something out of the ordinary is going on. An injunction, like an iceberg, has more to it than meets the eye.

The bare court order forbidding A to molest or interfere with B is just the visible part of a story which foreigners would not believe could ever happen in staid old Victoria. A female hypnotist arrives in our fair city; her mission, apparently, to induce a local lady to return to her divorced husband in Vancouver. Posing as a buyer of furniture, she approaches her quarry and arranges a business date for the evening. "Come into my parlor," said the spider to the fly, but this time the fly was nobody's fool. A private eye is retained and a plan concerted. Some hours later, as arranged, the faithful gumshoe repairs to the spider web and breaks up the little excursion into the occult. He finds his client under hypnosis, and at the suggestion of the hypnotist must play Prince Charming to rouse her. The incident ends with two members of the constabulary (who, as chance would have it, were nearby) becoming slightly entranced themselves.

Thus and thus. They say there is nothing new under the sun, and this may be so. But I would be very surprised to hear of the appearance of a hypnotic matchmaker in a court of law before. It brings to mind some other oddities which have occurred from time to time, mostly prosecutions under the Witchcraft Acts. A vestige of these delightful statutes is found in our Criminal Code, which makes it an offence fraudulently to pretend to exercise or to use any kind of witchcraft, sorcery, enchantment or conjuration.

It may be the benevolent legislators had it in mind to protect bona fide witches and sorcerers from the activities of charlatans who might bring their occupation into disrepute, for only those who pretend are in danger. So it is not surprising that there has been no reported case in Canada of a bona fide witch having been in any serious trouble; there are, however, some early cases in the ecclesiastical courts of Ireland. A volume in my possession recounts a trial supposed to have occurred before the Bishop of Cork and a certain Father Furiosus of the Inquisition, as recently as the early 18th century. A beldame of the village was accused of bewitching a young monk. He had been seen entering her cabin by night; mysterious flames had been observed by the villagers, flickering about on the rooftop; and several good men testified that the reverend brother had on two occasions flown in the air and done tight turns around the church steeple. Things looked very bad.

If only this had happened in modern Canada, nothing would have come of it, except perhaps an offer from the CBC to appear on television, but in holy Ireland such goings on, in the 14th century, were looked upon with a healthy eye. The beldame, shrieking spells and imprecations, was ordered put to the test. Now an ordinary person will sink in water, but a witch will not, as everybody knows; it is hardly necessary for me to recount such a well-known fact, but natural substances reject what is devilish. Accordingly, if you submerge a witch, she will pop to the surface instantaneously, like a cork. In this case, the accused was lowered into the river Lee and to everyone's amazement, sank like a stone; the learned divines were so busy wondering what to do next, that no one thought of pulling her out again, and so she drowned.

UN CORRESPONDENT

PETER STURSBURG

U.S. Losing Votes in UN

UNITED NATIONS—Despite all the talk about differences and disagreements, Canada has been, and remains, the greatest supporter of the United States in the United Nations, and presumably, elsewhere on the international scene. Yet, it has taken a good deal of research to prove this, so well have our words obscured our deeds.

An independent publication, The Chronicle of United Nations Activities, has analyzed the voting record of the last Assembly and shown that Canada agreed with the United States three quarters of the time. Only one other country, Brazil, gave the Americans greater support—and that by only a small amount.

The editors of The Chronicle, who are also statisticians, have studied not only the votes in the Assembly's plenary sessions but in the committees too. Thus, they have taken into account a cross section of issues in making their analysis, from the question of the gravest import such as the admission of Communist China to administrative and budgetary points.

INFLUENCE WHINDLES

Needless to say, they did not undertake this task merely to show that Canada was, and is, a good and loyal neighbor of the United States, but to find out if the suspicions that the Americans are losing influence here are right. They are right enough. "There has been a marked weakening of support for United States voting policies in the United Nations," according to The Chronicle.

In 1954, there were five countries which voted most of the time with the United States to one country—which voted most of the time against the United States. However, this publication says that by the end of 1955, this ratio had dropped to two to one. There are still twice as many in favor of the Americans than against them, and a large amorphous group in the middle—but the decline has been sharp.

Just a year or so ago, which is already the old days, the only countries who were in the "mostly against" column were the five members of the Soviet bloc. At the last Assembly, six countries joined them: Afghanistan, Saudi Arabia, India, Yemen, Syria, and Yugoslavia. In fact, as far as voting against the Americans is concerned, Yugoslavia might just as well have returned to the Cominform. Besides Canada, those who voted most of the time with the United States were allies, members of NATO (with the notable exception of Greece), or the South East Asia Treaty Organization, SEATO, and a few Latin American countries. As to the other main Western Alliance, the Baghdad Pact or METO, neither Iraq nor Iran, voted the American way here.

MANY ABSTENTIONS

As has been reported, Canada voted with the United States 75 per cent of the time, while Canadian representatives opposed the Americans on less than 10 per cent of the ballots; abstentions are the reason why these figures do not balance. Furthermore, The Chronicle says that Canada agreed more often with the United States last year than the year before.

This is surprising when some of the rows at the last Assembly are recalled. There was the fight over the admission of new members; Canada's initiative on this matter was frowned on by the Americans, to say the least. Then, there was the atoms-for-peace debate. Paul Martin was accused of tearing up the proposed statute for an atomic agency which Canada had drawn up with the United States in order to get agreement and a unanimous resolution.

In both cases, however, Canada did not vote against the United States. There was a unanimous resolution in the atoms-for-peace debate, and on the admission of new members, the Americans abstained.

Vancouver Island Viewpoint

From Up-Island Newspaper Editorial Columns

Importance of Water

THE REVIEW, SIDNEY—There's a very significant petition circulating in Central Saanich these days. The petition may have far-reaching effects.

Those circulating the petition are anxious that the Central Saanich municipal council give leadership to a program which would see the water mains of the Greater Victoria water district extended northward from the northern borders of Saanich Municipality. Here is a very far-sighted move. Because there is not the slightest shadow of doubt but that Sooke water should be piped to every nook and cranny on the Saanich Peninsula.

Laying of the necessary mains would cost money. Everyone knows that. But the effect on the economy of the entire south of Vancouver Island would be tremendous. The provincial government, quite properly, is planning to provide up to $10,000,000 for the beautification of British Columbia's capital. We are confident that Premier Bennett, if the facts are put before him and a sensible appeal is sounded, will provide provincial funds for the financing of a major extension of water services to the northern end of the Peninsula.

Reorganization Is a Healthy Sign

PARKVILLE, QUALICUM BEACH PROGRESS—Reorganization of the Comox South Liberal Association, carried out at a recent meeting in Parkville, is a healthy sign.

With a strong slate of officers, this group cannot help but be a constructive force in the political life of this district, despite the fact that the Liberal party, which it naturally supports, is no longer in power in this province.

Even non-members of Comox South Liberal Association who were privileged to attend its meetings in the past couldn't help but notice one commendable feature of its sessions—they were never held for the sole purpose of singing the praises of the party which the group supported. Members were loyal but not blindly loyal; if they felt that Liberal members of the Legislature had failed to act in the public interest on certain measures, they had no hesitation in quietly informing these in power of their opinion.

Busy North Cowichan

THE COWICHAN LEADER—North Cowichan Council's planning for the progressive development of its large municipality will have its greatest effect upon those of its residents who have felt themselves to be "immersed in the country."

Orderly planning calls for considerable courage. There is no lack of this on the part of the present council, which is making every effort to direct the future needs of the municipality along the best lines.

Changes there undoubtedly will have to be as evidence is presented in matters where it is felt regulations are too restrictive. It is certain, however, that the day of unrestricted and haphazard growth is ending as far as North Cowichan is concerned. Present developments will affect everyone who lives within its boundaries.

The council's zoning and town-planning will form the needed blueprint for the satisfaction of future housing needs. The City of Duncan is now almost entirely built up, its compactness a model of its kind. North Cowichan has a busy future facing it. Its council needs constructive criticism to cope with the problems which lie ahead.

E & N Schedule Reversal Rejected But Study Pledged

A suggestion from the retail mercantile section of Victoria Chamber of Commerce that the E & N Railway passenger schedule be reversed to allow up-island residents more shopping time in Victoria will be considered by the company.

For the time being, though, the proposal has been rejected. At present the company's new rail car leaves Victoria in mid-morning and does not return until the late afternoon.

The Victoria merchants suggested reversing the schedule to have the car start its daily round trip at Courtenay. In that way, they said, time would be available for shopping between arrival and departure of the car.

Nanaimo Opens $8,500 Drive For Red Cross

Big Parade Today; Canvass Tuesday

NANAIMO—Fire department, Nanaimo Pipe Band and contingents from navy, army and air cadet corps marched here today in a parade to highlight the opening of the Red Cross campaign to raise $8,500 here.

Drum majorettes and nurses also marched in the parade. Sum of $3,500 already has been contributed. Biggest single effort in the campaign will be a residential canvass Tuesday night.

The federal government is understood to be negotiating for the purchase of land immediately south of the new post office-federal building here, likely to provide parking space at the new building.

Post office workers as well as residents wanting to mail letters have reported being inconvenienced by the lack of parking space adjacent to the building.

"There is room for at least 100 cars behind the post office, but you cannot get there without trespassing on private property," a postal official said.

CRP owns the property beside the building, although it was leased for two years to the contractor who erected the post office.

Two youths have been apprehended by RCMP as suspects in the breaking and entering of Nanaimo curling rink early Friday.

Cameron Critical On Defence Costs

OTTAWA (CP)—A CCF member predicted in the Commons Friday that next year when a federal general election is expected—the government will make "a very large" cut in defence spending.

"And we shall be told then, of course," said Colin Cameron, Nanaimo, "that there has been a tremendous change in the international climate."

"We shall be told that the cold war is warming up."

Mr. Cameron said Britain now is facing the fact it is impossible for her to develop effective defences.

"Her only hope is to develop a real and effective disarmament program in the world."

Canada might find herself in the same position. Mr. Cameron joined J. M. Macdonnell, Progressive Conservative financial critic, and CCF leader Coldwell in criticizing defence spending during debate on the new budget.

The budget outlined last Tuesday night by Finance Minister Harris was "singularly devoid of information," Mr. Cameron said.

atmosphere, the lush hotels, and the gay life for which the islands are noted. For the wealthy, it caters to every taste, and the attractions are many.

What is not so well-known, though is the fact that accommodation within one block of the beach is available for as low as $3 per day—a clean room with its own shower. "Accommodation is ample and the cost of living is reasonable," C. E. Blaney, Victoria travel agent, said of the islands.

VARIETY A-PLenty

Honolulu can be all things to all people. There are unbounded opportunities for the golfer and sport fisherman. There is an active social life for the gregarious, and new vistas in all directions for all travelers.

According to the experts, every island has its distinctive style of beauty, and deserts, mountains, rivers, and lush plantations can be found beside cattle and sheep ranches and active volcanoes. Hawaii, the largest of the islands, is mountainous and the centre of volcanic activity. Maui is a mixture of mountain and desert, and Molokai boasts some of the most precipitous peaks and valleys.

Lanai and Kahoolawe are the homes of the huge pineapple plantations, and Kaula, with its many rivers and waterfalls, also has a canyon that compares favorably with Grand Canyon of the Colorado.

Oahu, in the centre of the group, is the site of Honolulu and Pearl Harbor.

NATURE LOVER

The natural attractions were what proved most popular with Edd Cuppage, local businessman who spent a holiday there with his family.

"I liked the swimming and lying around in the sun," he said. "There is not much emphasis on tourism, and prices are reasonable."

Mr. Cuppage said that the cost of a holiday in the islands, once the traveler arrives, there is no more than that of a trip on Vancouver Island, assuming one stays at the better hotels and motels.

"The fare is the biggest single expense," he said. Most of the Hawaiian holiday seekers now travel by air, since one can leave Victoria at noon and arrive at 11:30 p.m. Honolulu time, the same day. One can also fly at night.

SHIPS POPULAR

Ship travel is still popular, though, with the Orient Line running from Vancouver, and the well known Japanese NYK Line making special trips in the holiday season.

Probably most famous of the ships is the Lurline of the Matson Line that sails from both Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Honolulu is attractive both winter and summer, but the contrast is more marked in the winter months. Water temperature is between 73 and 76 degrees, and according to Mr. Cuppage, "one floats like a cork. There is no tide to speak of."

So that is Honolulu, just a day's travel from Victoria, and so popular with people here that one of the cocktail lounges in a swank hotel is known as the "Vancouver Room."

"We thought it should be the British Columbia room," a Victoria resident said who has just finished her fourth holiday on the islands. "But we appreciated the gesture."

Chamber Directors Support Civic Grants to Symphony

Hans Gruber, conductor of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, obtained the full support of Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors Friday in his efforts to get a civic grant for the orchestra.

After hearing Mr. Gruber at their monthly meeting, the directors unanimously recommended that city and municipal councils make a grant of not less than five cents per capita to the orchestra.

Coun. Pat Birley estimated that this tax would produce at least $7,000 a year for the orchestra.

Mr. Gruber invited all the Chamber directors to attend this Sunday's symphony concert in the Royal Theatre as his guests.

"The people of Victoria have been so kind to me and my family that I feel I owe them nothing less than the finest music I can create," he said.

Cancer Progress

PARIS (Reuters) — Professor Riccardo Galeazzi-Lisi, the Pope's personal physician, revealed to a French audience at the Catholic Institute Friday that he and a group of other doctors had developed a biological test to give early warning of cancer. "This same test equally allows attenuation of pain among sufferers from advanced cancer, avoiding the ultimate use of drugs with their dangers," he said.

BEASTALL ADVISES

Some Plants Do Well From Root Cuttings

Quite often the easiest way to obtain an increase in plants is by the use of root cuttings, a phase of gardening rarely indulged in by an amateur.

The roots must be able to develop growth buds otherwise no plants will result, and since all roots are not able to do this the practice is limited to certain subjects.

A good example of root cuttings are the Hawaiian "u" plants now flourishing in many Victoria homes. The small brown log-like pieces which were planted were actually pieces of root.

The plants most commonly propagated in this way are sea kale and horseradish and to these we can add anchusa, oriental poppy, verbasum (mullein), gillardia, echinops (sea holly), eryngium (sea holly), phlox, gypsophila (baby's breath), to mention just the better known garden subjects.

All the gardener has to do is dig up one of these plants and cut off some of the thick fleshy roots, leaving sufficient to maintain the plants when set back in the border.

Each severed root is then cut into lengths of from one to five inches. The bottom cut is made on the slant so the gardener will not insert the cuttings upside down.

Phlox roots are made into three-inch pieces with both ends cut square, and these are laid on the soil. Primula denticulata is handled the same way using one-inch lengths.

Seakale and horseradish roots are cut into four or five-inch lengths and may be inserted upright in the open garden. Two-inch lengths are suitable for the other plants mentioned.

Boxes, clay seed pans or ordinary clay flower pots may be used to hold the cuttings until growth is evident. A mixture of two parts peat moss, one part loam and three parts sand is usually suggested. This can be varied according to the heaviness of the loam, but keep to a reasonably sandy mixture.

Fill the pots or boxes and leave room at the top for a thin covering of sandy soil mixture or straight sand. The former is best for phlox cuttings.

A dibber, or stick with a blunt point, is used to make the holes for root cuttings, which are inserted full depth, the tops being flush with the mixture.

Gentle heat will increase root action but is not essential, an unheated greenhouse or cold frame being the usual place for rooting. Water thoroughly and never let the rooting mixture become dry.

Increase ventilation as growth commences, and regulate watering to suit conditions.

Robt. cuttings of herbaceous perennials taken now should be ready for planting out about late June.

Fungi are despoiling two of America's loveliest trees, says the National Geographic Society. Dutch elm disease is widely attacking the American elm and white pine blister rust is threatening the five-needle pine. Millions of dollars are being spent to eradicate these pests.

Seedlings and cuttings in porch or greenhouse must be syringed with tepid water on warm days.

All pot plants in full growth will need ample watering on sunny days.

Plant a few early sprouted potatoes.

Set out early started peas after hardening off gradually.

Sow a few early peas.

Set out a few early lettuce plants.

Tomato plants for early fruiting indoors should now be transferred into final pots nine to 10 inches in diameter.

Order and plant whenever soil is ready, such things as fruit trees, azaleas, rhododendrons, heathers, flowering shrubs, perennials, roses.

Place orders for special items in the annual bedding plants, since there will probably be a large demand for them this year.

Old U.S. TV Movies Irk U.K. Movie Men

By ERSKINE JOHNSON
HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Behind the screen: England is wailing about American movies on British TV.

It's the laugh of the year for U.S. television fans who can remember when old English movies dominated the late, late shows.

IN MOVIE—Stewart Granger stars in the fine British movie "Madonna of the Seven Moons" which will be shown over Channel 5 Sunday at 7.30 p.m. Phyllis Calvert and Patricia Roc are his co-stars.

Some of them are still with us and another Boston Tea (V) Party to dump all old British movies into the sea is an excellent idea. But old U.S. movies on British TV is no laughing matter for the owners of British movie theatres. Commercial TV in England has sent the box office into a nose dive. Drops of 47 million in attendance and $9,000,000 in gross business are reported from London. Theatre business on Fridays and Saturdays "has been slowed down," it is said, to 50 per cent of the previous traffic. Having seen a couple of old English A (for awful) movies on TV, I'm convinced the British film

Coward Plays Show Sponsors

NEW YORK (UP) — Noel Coward, the darling of the international set and enfant terrible of TV, faces up to a tricky problem within the next few days.

The question: whether Coward gets airtime or just gets the air.

Coward, a performer who is almost as well-traveled as Charlie Chan, may get his walking papers from the auto firm that sponsors his spectaculars. The firm is reported to consider Coward too sophisticated for the nation's living rooms.

Last week, Coward submitted to CBS-TV a revised version of "Present Laughter," an old Coward vehicle, for the May 5 slot. Coward called it, quite innocently, "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star." However, Coward's auto sponsor decided it was a bit too hot for TV since it revolved around Coward's favorite theme—adults and adultery.

The past Monday, CBS-TV told Coward it simply wouldn't do. On Wednesday, there were hurried meetings in the offices of the high CBS brass. Time was running out. The auto sponsor's next spectacular for CBS-TV, "Twentieth Century" with Orson Welles and Betty Grable, is set for April 7. The May 5 vehicle and cast must be chosen by then.

It was decided to give Coward another chance. Another old Coward effort, "This Happy Breed," which Coward just revised while vacationing in Jamaica, was submitted to CBS officials and the auto sponsor.

THE WINNERS—TV star Phil Silvers and actress Nanette Fabray were obviously happy as they posed in New York with the "Emmy" awards they won at the Television Academy of Arts and Sciences Awards dinner. The presentation ceremonies were seen over a national TV hookup. Silvers got three awards, the first time so many have been won by a single performer.

Panel Trouble Plaguing 'What's My Line?' Quiz

NEW YORK (UP)—Evelyn Patrick, who is currently dating Phil Silvers, will take over Barbara Britton's commercial chores on "The $64,000 Question" beginning April 10.

Miss Britton had to give up the $64,000 night job because she's going into a Broadway play, "Wake Up Darling," with Barry Nelson. However, Miss Britton still will be doing commercial spots for the lipstick company—she'll demonstrate the commercials on the new Sunday show, "The $64,000 Challenge," which starts April 8. "Challenge" won't conflict with her Broadway assignment.

CBS-TV's "Omnibus" has managed to get hold of a copy of the secret transcript of the 1925 court-suit of Billy Mitchell and will dramatize the proceedings on April 1, its last telecast of the season.

Julius La Rosa, Patti Page and Peggy Lee are shaping up as the replacements for Perry Como this summer. . . . ABC-TV's "MGM Parade" goes to the scrapheap early in May.

"What's My Line" is facing real panel problems. Garry Moore has volunteered to sit in this Sunday on the late Fred Allen's spot, but no permanent replacement has been lined up. The producers also must find substitutes for Dorothy Kilgallen and Arlene Francis, both of whom soon take off for Grace Kelly's wedding.

Special Water Sets Required For TV Drama

By DICK KLEINER

One of the most ambitious TV projects yet will be the Kraft Theatre's March 28 version of the best-selling "A Night to Remember," the story of the sinking of the Titanic.

Kraft hired a marine engineer to help in the constructing of between 20 and 40 sets, 20 of which will show parts of the ship under varying amounts of water. Because Radio City has a ruling that no more than four inches of water can be poured on any set, the show will come from NBC's Brooklyn color studio. It'll be the first black-and-white program ever from a color studio.

Gloria DeHaven has come into her own. The short and sweet singer, poured into a luscious yellow-and-silver gown, stops the show at the Cotillion room in New York's Hotel Pierre. There's nobody around who can touch her at belting out a torch song.

Also on the bill at the Cotillion are Lucille and Eddie Roberts, the delightful mind-readers. This is one of the most engaging teams in show business. Engaging may not be quite the word—they've been married over 25 years. Lucille was a Virginia librarian when she married Eddie, then doing a single act. She wanted to stay with him, so she learned the mind-reading trade.

DID YOU KNOW.. by Heaney's

IN EARLY 18TH CENTURY ENGLAND THE PUNISHMENT FOR MOST CRIMES WAS BANISHMENT TO THE NEW WORLD. AT FIRST THE CRIMINAL COULD CARRY OUT HIS OWN SENTENCE BY LEAVING HIS HOMELAND. LATER THE OUTCAST WAS TRANSPORTED TO AMERICA BY A CONTRACTOR WHO SOLD HIM INTO SLAVERY. IN 1776 AMERICA PUT A STOP TO "TRANSPORTATION" AS THIS METHOD OF DEALING WITH THE PRISONERS WAS CALLED. AS A TEMPORARY PLAN ENGLAND ESTABLISHED PRISON "HULKS" IN THE COUNTRY'S MAIN SEAPORTS. ALTHOUGH A TEMPORARY MEASURE THESE FLOATING PRISONS EXISTED FOR NEARLY 100 YEARS AND THE LAST OF THEM CLOSED JUST 100 YEARS AGO. ALTHOUGH FACILITIES ON THE HULKS WERE DEPLORABLE A GOVERNMENT COMMITTEE REPORTED THAT THE INMATES ENJOYED A "PRETTY JOLLY LIFE, WELL FED, WELL CLOTHED, INDULGING IN RIOTOUS ENJOYMENT BY NIGHT, WITH MODERATE LABOUR BY DAY."

IN THE OLD DAYS MOVING WAS INDEED A PUNISHMENT. TODAY WITH GIANT ALLIED VANS ROLLING ALONG THE HIGHWAYS OF NORTH AMERICA A MOVE TO A DISTANT HOME IS AS EASY AS A CITY MOVE. YOUR COMPLETE HOUSEHOLD FURNISHINGS ARE SECURELY PACKED IN A CLEAN ALLIED VAN RIGHT AT YOUR DOOR—NO EXTRA HANDLING, NO SPECIAL CRATING, NO LOSS OR DAMAGE WHEN YOU LEAVE YOUR "TRANSPORTATION" TO HEANEY'S.

Worsley or Bell? Watson Won't Tell

GUMP WORSLEY ... in or out?
TOD SLOAN ... out for sure

By The Canadian Press

Two months ago Gordie Bell, veteran minor league goaltender, was ready to quit hockey.

Now the hero of New York Rangers' 4-2 victory over the Canadiens in Montreal, Thursday, waits nervously to learn whether he will see action against the Canadiens here tonight in his second National Hockey League playoff game.

With the best-of-seven series tied at a game apiece, coach Phil Watson said he couldn't decide until just before game time whether to go with his standby goalie or return to his regular netminder, Lorne "Gump" Worsley, who sat out Thursday's game because of a sore knee.

MAY SNAP BACK

Canadians were due in New York this morning after an overnight train ride from Montreal. They didn't work out Friday but they were worked over by coach Toe Blake, who said:

"We had our meeting and we cried over our mistakes. If we can't take a game in New York then we shouldn't be in the series. If we are going to be a bunch of homers we might as well bow out."

Blake said he thinks the Canadiens will snap back from the defeat. He blamed over-confidence to some degree for the loss.

Meanwhile Toronto's brittle-bone chances for the Stanley Cup appear at the breaking point. Maple Leafs' hopes were shaken Thursday night on the rinkside boards of Detroit Olympia when centre Todd Sloan crumpled to the ice with a fractured shoulder bone.

OUT FOR PLAYOFFS

Sloan, whose 37 goals during the regular NHL campaign made him the most productive Leaf player in 10 years, is out for the rest of the semi-finals against Detroit Red Wings.

Leaves meet the Wings tonight at Toronto in the third game of the best-of-seven playoff—down 2-0 in the series. Unless they come up with a surprise replacement from the bench, they will be in trouble.

Leaves learned of Sloan's injury Friday when the team returned from Detroit. The 28-year-old centre suffered a fracture of the right shoulder blade when he and right-winger Gordie Howe, of the Wings, fell into the boards.

It was a big blow to the Leafs. Sloan, centre on their big line with rookie left-winger Dick Duff and right-winger George Armstrong, was the key man in Toronto's run to the fourth and last playoff spot.

IF YOU CAN'T BEAT 'EM, SHOOT 'EM, IN TORONTO

TORONTO (CP)—The Star says its sports department has received an anonymous telephone threat that Detroit Red Wings hockey stars Ted Lindsay and Gordie Howe will be shot if they attempt to take the ice in tonight's National Hockey League semifinal playoffs against Toronto Maple Leafs.

It says a male voice said simply: "Lindsay and Howe will be shot if they play tonight."

The threat was apparently uttered in a spirit of revenge over the injury of Maple Leaf player Tod Sloan at the last game in Detroit.

Gene's Flipper Pain to Braves

By United Press

Only a week ago the Milwaukee Braves discounted reports that Gene Conley was all through as a pitcher, but today they said they had the six-foot-eight right-hander has re-injured his throwing arm.

Conley, the mainstay of the Milwaukee staff and the guy who could beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, reported stiffness in his right shoulder and it was later diagnosed as an injury to the ligaments that hold together the bones of the shoulder.

The injury is the same as the one that befell the 25-year-old hurler in mid-August of last season. General manager John Quinn announced Conley will have a thorough examination on Monday by Dr. Michael Di Cicola at Sarasota.

DODGER KILLER

The likeable 25-year-old pitcher, who resides in Richland, Wash., during the off-season, compiled a 52 record against the Dodgers in 1954, his rookie season, but slipped to an overall record of 6-6 last season.

"Gene will be all right," Manager Charlie Grimm has been saying right along this spring. "He has had his share of tough luck and maybe things will balance out for him this year. If they do, watch out for us."

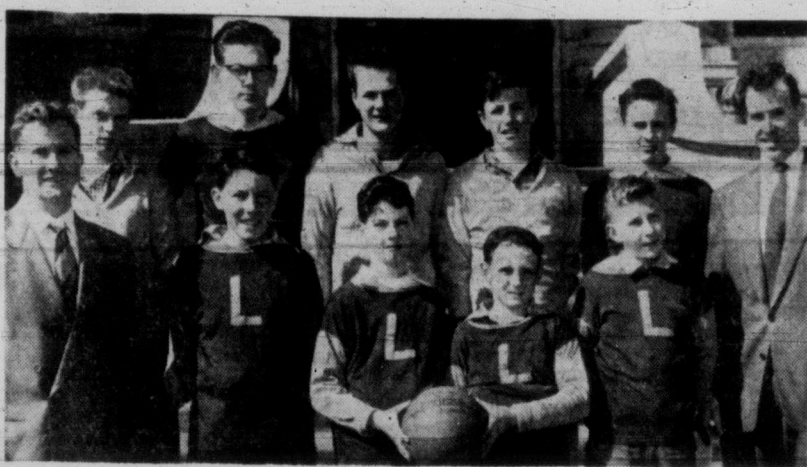

Grimm has been counting on Conley, who won 11 games before injuring his shoulder last summer, to anchor a pitching staff composed of Warren Spahn, Bob Buhl, Chet Nichols and Lew Burdette, none of whom have been particularly effective against the hard-hitting Dodgers.

Meanwhile, the way rookie shortstop Louis Aparicio is fielding it won't take Chicago White Sox fans long to forget Chico Carrasquel. The slender shortstop and rookie second baseman Sam Esposito handled 12 chances flawlessly Friday as the Sox downed the Philadelphia Phillies, 4-3. Aparicio had six assists during the tight contest and it marked the fifth straight game in which he hasn't committed an error.

REDS' SPORTS BUDGET A COOL $100,000,000

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)—The Soviet Union is spending about $100,000,000 this Olympic year on sport, a Russian official said Friday.

Mikhail Peslajk, vice-president of the Russian Olympics committee, drew gasps from Australians at a press conference when he gave the figure 400 million Russian rubles, which is $100,000,000 at the official rate.

Australia has allocated only $6,000,000 Australian, $13,440,000, for the whole Olympic Games, of which $5,000,000 are for new stadiums and $1,000,000 for administrative costs.

Walker Named Olympic Coach

MONTREAL (CP)—Don Mitchell, president of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, announced today that Fred Whit-tail, of Montreal, has been named general manager of Canada's swimming team at the 1956 Olympic Games and Tommy Walker, of Toronto, the coach.

NANAIMO (CP)—Nanaimo Clippers, led by Angie Defelice who picked up five goals, trounced Trail All-stars, 10-2, in the first game of the British Columbia intermediate Coy Cup hockey finals here Friday night.

Trail, tired from a long automobile trip, was no match for the powerful, hard-driving Clippers. Clippers got nine unanswered goals before the all-stars broke through at 4:10 of the third period.

Don Smith opened the scoring for Nanaimo at 2:43 of the first period and Red Carr, George Milford and Bill Sutherland with two made it 5-0 at the end of the period.

Defelice got the only two goals in the second period, one a blistering drive from 30 feet out that caught Reno Zanier flat-footed. Trail came to life for a few minutes in the period getting through the Nanaimo defence, but Nanaimo's goalie slammed the door on them.

Defelice potted two goals with less than two minutes gone in the third period to give Clippers a comfortable 9-0 lead.

Laurie Bursaw finally broke through for Trail giving them their first goal of the game at 4:10. Jones added their second at 11:46 and Defelice got his fifth at 15:08 to end the scoring.

Both teams meet here again tonight with the third game, if necessary, on Sunday afternoon. Winner will meet the Alberta champions in Alberta in the Western Canada playoff.

HAIR AND NAME REAL, SO THERE

Georgie Just Loves Beauty

BY OLI DAUM
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Gorgeous George, the Goldilocks of the wrestling ring, says he doesn't wear his hair long just for publicity. Its been long all his life.

And Gorgeous George isn't a nickname. Five years ago he made it his legal moniker—changed from a less glamorous George Wagner.

"Ever since I was a child I've wanted beautiful things and meant to acquire as many of them as I could," he said here in an interview.

Even if he weren't a wrestler he'd groom his shining tresses in shoulder-length styles and douse himself with perfume—for the sake of beauty.

The barrel-chested baritone, cast as a villain in his wrestling appearances, says he's had his exquisite locks-cared for professionally almost every day since he had his first permanent 15 years ago. And the constant washing, bleaching and setting wasn't nearly as hard on them as were the yanks they were subjected to by other wrestlers.

Even so his long hair, worn in a back swirl, is an advantage in and outside the ring. "It hurts a lot more to have short hair pulled than it does to have long hair pulled," Gorgeous said. "In this business I wouldn't want a crew-cut."

The burly, 210-pound Gorgeous said he isn't self-conscious when he walks into a beauty salon filled with women. In primping himself he was only doing what all men did many years ago.

"They wore colorful robes, jeweled stockings and long, waved wigs long before women did," he said.

Besides, the women usually asked for his autograph or for one of his "Georgie" pins—gold-plated bobby pins he uses to keep his locks in place.

"Men who go to a barber shop meet only other men," Gorgeous said. "I go to a beauty parlor and meet women."

The brown-eyed blond has built a reputation on his daz-zling appearance in the ring. He wears a different hair-do and perfume with each of his 127 magnificent robes, which he has insured for $50,000.

Between bouts Gorgeous visits his two children, Carol Sue George, 11, and Donald George, 10, and his $265,000 turkey ranch at Beaumont, Calif., near Los Angeles.

"What do his children think of a primped and perfumed papa?"

"They're just over 10 and since I've been having my hair done for 15 years they have never known any differ-ent," said Gorgeous.

Three Days Are Ladies Days As Men Vacate Curling Club

The ladies have taken over at the Victoria Curling Club this weekend.

A record total of 39 rinks, which works out to 156 women curlers of all shapes, sizes and skill have taken over along with friends and relatives VCC's eminently male domain for the annual ladies' bonspiel.

After the usual gossiping, giggling and general comparing of notes, the girls got around to curling, and five rinks emerged unscathed after the first day's play, Friday.

They are the Barnes, McKay, McClure and McKibben rinks from Victoria, and the Smith and McCracken foursomes from Vancouver. All have reached the eighth of the Eaton's primary.

Of all those women, 19 rinks are from out of town: 10 from Vancouver, two each from Port

Alberni and Nanaimo, and one each from Seattle, Parksville, Prince George, Duncan and Chilliwack.

They will compete for the Eaton's, Hudson's Bay, Sears and Scurrah trophies. The Chisholm draw is being used, with each rink guaranteed four games, and no rink playing in more than one event at one time.

Play will continue today with finals scheduled for Sunday.

BETWEEN TIMES By MONTE ROBERTS

Ah, Saturday. Love that Saturday. Saturday is followed by Sunday, you know. Thus Saturday is the loveliest day in the week.

But Sunday. Nothing much wrong with Sunday, except Sunday is followed by Monday.

Hate that Monday.

Possibly something could be done. Would need co-operation of calendar manufacturers and weatherman.

What could be done is create an extra Sunday. Have a Sunday, Mark I, and a Sunday, Mark II.

Thus we could love that Sunday, Mark I, because it would be followed by Sunday, Mark II.

Where does weatherman come in?

Weatherman would be expected to provide extremely clement weather for Sunday, Mark I.

On Sunday, Mark I, we could get our gardening done (after having attended church, of course), and cut our wood and clean up the joint in general and fall into bed in a state of complete exhaustion.

The next day would be Sunday, Mark II. On this day, weatherman would be expected to supply rain, cloudy skies, and an atmosphere of complete silence.

So on Sunday, Mark II, we would wake up, look out the window, and go back to sleep.

Thereby recovering from our labors on Sunday, Mark I.

The next day, Monday, weatherman can forget about. Everybody would be back at regular chores, so it wouldn't matter whether it rained, hailed, blew or snowed.

Now, don't go shooting this idea down in flames. Don't say it is impossible.

Anything is possible for calendar manufacturers. They have already caused May 24 to fall on May 21, and July 1 to fall on July 2.

All we need from calendar manufacturers is an eight-day week.

Ah, Saturday. Love that Saturday.

And a reasonably weak weekend to you, too.

Point Ellice Bridge Unsafe Since 1913

Engineer Details History of Span

Point Ellice Bridge was overloaded and had insufficient margin of safety as far back as 1913, according to yellowing files at Victoria City Hall.

An historical report on the bridge was delivered to Mayor Percy Scurrell Friday by city engineer J. C. Garnett.

Victoria property holders will vote April 5 in a plebiscite on proposed $550,000 expenditure to replace the aging structure. Funds are already on hand from city sale of tax-reverted lands.

The present structure was designed and built in 1903, seven years after the original Point Ellice bridge collapsed catapulting a street car loaded with 100 holidaying passengers into the Gorge narrows. Fifty-five bodies were recovered.

The 1903 bridge has never outgrown the calamity and watchful eyes of Victorians have been on it since its construction.

In 1913, when it was 10 years old, the then assistant city engineer, a Mr. Taylor, demonstrated that even the meagre traffic of that day was overloading the structure. He said there was an insufficient margin of safety and speed restrictions were imposed.

Railway Barge Bids Called by Tug Firm

Island Spruce To Be Rebuilt

Island Tug & Barge Ltd. is making plans to enter the railway barge towing field.

Tenders will be called next week for conversion of the former oil-tanker Island Spruce to a barge with capacity for 21 railway freight cars.

This will make her the largest car barge operating on the Pacific Coast.

The plan is to operate Island Spruce out of the Elk Falls Co. Ltd. pulp mill of Crown Zellerbach at Duncan Bay.

The tanker, which was named Carlotta before being purchased by Island Tug, is now in the inner harbor. Her superstructure was taken off by Island Tug workmen, after which she was taken to Esquimalt harbor where her machinery was removed.

She is ready now for the final stages of conversion, including decking and laying of tracks for the railway cars.

Island Tug owns seven ships of this type, five of which have been converted to self-dumping log barges. The intention is to make a bulk carrier of the seventh.

Fishermen's Union Rejects Two-Year Wage Agreement

United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (Ind.) has rejected a Fisheries' Association proposal for a two-year wage agreement offering 2 per cent increase this year and an additional 2 per cent in 1957.

Salmon tendermen's negotiating committee said the wage proposal was "entirely too small to be worthy of consideration," some proposals were unrealistic, there was no provision for control of hours, and companies overlooked a union request for compulsory check-off union dues.

The union recommends two courses of action: That the conciliation officer, J. C. Sherlock, bring in his recommendation for settlement, or a conciliation board be appointed.

Association proposal included an additional half-day off per month this year and another half-day next year, the 1956 offer applying to away-from-home ports, and next year's applying to home ports.

Other concessions of a minor nature were listed by the companies.

MUSIC FESTIVAL CHAMPIONS

Smiling faces of 14-year-old Janet Thom and her Japanese partner, Catherine Arakawa, above, both of Vancouver, are result of Janet's capturing the coveted City of Victoria Medalion piano trophy in the Greater Victoria Music Festival which concluded Friday night. Janet, accompanied by Catherine at the second piano, played part of Beethoven's C Major Concerto. Major vocal award, the B.C. Electric Rose Bowl, was won by Clemency Perrins, left, young but veteran winner of many previous festival vocal classes.

Hearing on City TV Wednesday in Ottawa

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's board of governors next Wednesday will hear applications of Victoria radio station CKDA and New Westminster's CKNW for television licences to serve this area.

While the board meets Wednesday to hear the applications by CKDA owner David Armstrong and William Rea of CKNW, it is not expected a decision will be reached for some time after.

Both station owners will be in Ottawa for the submissions.

CKDA, which if granted a licence would be known as CKTV as a television outlet, today announced location of its proposed studios.

They would be on the present CKDA transmitter property on Derby Road. CKNW announced earlier its proposed transmitter and studios would be located on Smith's Hill, where a land option is held.

The CKTV studios, designed by Clark Clayton, Pickstone, architects, would include a large two-camera studio with mechanical facilities, a TV newscast studio, offices, and a reception area for persons attending live TV performances.

The building would be fireproof due to costly equipment housed. Architects have planned for expansion and extensions, which would include radio broadcast facilities now located downtown, making a full-scheme radio-TV centre.

Local VC Winners Will Attend Centennial Fete

Greater Victoria's three Victoria Cross winners have accepted the invitation to attend VC centennial celebrations in London in June.

They are Major-General G. R. Pearce, MP, Col. Cyrus Peck and Cmdr. Rowland Bourke.

Thirty-six of the 38 known VC holders in Canada have signified they will attend. The veterans affairs department has not heard from the other two.

Thirty-two relatives of VC winners, 17 next-of-kin of Canadians awarded the medal posthumously and 10 relatives of deceased winners also will make the trip.

The federal government will pay transportation costs for VC winners and their near relatives. Incidental expenses must be born by recipients themselves.

ASK The TIMES

Q.—Is there a period of time known as 12 a.m.?—R.G.S.

A.—No moment in time is recognized as such. The instant of 12 m. is noon, when the sun is directly over the meridian on which the observer stands. When the other half of the meridian is in complete darkness; midnight might be called 12 a.m., but it would not be exactly correct, as the instant of midnight is not ante meridian but meridian. However, the abbreviation m. is being used for noon. To avoid all doubt it is usual to write it out, thus 12 midnight.

Chinese Scouts Plant 100 Waterfront Trees

Victoria Scouts don't merely believe in talking about beautification and conservation—they are doing something about it.

Today the Chinese troop led by Scoutmaster Freeman King planted 100 three-year-old seedling Douglas fir trees on the waterfront of Beacon Hill Park.

Her an "okay" by the city parks department.

The plan is to halt erosion of the waterfront and act as a windbreak, as well as adding to the beauty of the waterfront area.

Seedlings were obtained from the B.C. Forest Service through Harold McWilliams, in charge of reforestation.

Good Friday Music Will Be Featured

Once again in the procession of the seasons the Christian world comes to Palm Sunday. Briefly tomorrow, millions in the world will pause to recall one of the high moments recorded in the New Testament, Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem.

A week ago was Passion Sunday, one of the great steps toward the beginning of Paschionide and one of the great steps toward the crowning solemnity of Good Friday and the Crucifixion. Then, at the close of Holy Week will come the "Queen of Feasts," Easter Sunday, commemorating that high event on which all the hopes of Christians centre.

The choir of Christ Church Cathedral will sing the St. Matthew Passion on Good Friday at 8 p.m. Accompanied by a small chamber ensemble, soloists will be E. Oldfield, John Bray, Eleanor Duff, Hazel Sherratt and Audrey Saville.

At the evening service in First United Church—Sunday the choir will present the Lenten cantata music of Dubois, "The Seven Words of Christ," a vivid portrayal of the trial and crucifixion of Our Savior. Mary Wood will conduct. Malcolm Hamilton will play the organ and soloists will be Alice Waddell, Paul Wharf and J. Roberto Wood.

At the morning service the choir will sing the Passion Chorale of Bach, "O Sacred Head, Now Wounded."

At St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church—Sunday evening the choir and soloists will sing Maunders' sacred cantata "Olivet to Calvary" which recalls simply and reverently the scenes which mark Jesus' last few days on earth.

Soloists are Kay Paulin, L.R.S.M. soprano; William Patterson, tenor; and John Bray, baritone.

At a sacred concert to be presented by the choir of Metropolitan United Church Wednesday evening at 8, Margaret Abbott will be the featured soloist. Dorothy Young Mallory will present an organ recital and soloists for Handel's "Messiah," Part III, will be Grace Adams and Harry Johns.

The complete program: Ave Verum, Byrd (1543-1623). Organ: Passacaglia A Fugue, Bach (1685-1750); Dorothy Young Mallory. From the Requiem, Brahms (1833-1897). (a) Blest are they that mourn. (b) How lovely are Thy dwellings fair. (c) Ye who now sorrow. (Soloist) Margaret Abbott. Organ: From "The Stations of the Cross," Dupre (1866). (d) Jesus is condemned to death. (e) Jesus meets His mother. (f) Jesus is nailed on the Cross. (g) Jesus died upon the Cross. Dorothy Young Mallory. Messiah, Part III, Handel (1685-1759). Soloists, Grace Adams and Harry Johns.

A special evensong has been arranged at St. John's Anglican Church Sunday, devoted to the Passion music of Bach and Dvorak, to be performed by the choir, with Frederick Chubb at the organ.

Stainer's "Crucifixion" will be presented by the choir of Emmanuel Baptist Church Good Friday at 8 p.m.

Soloists will be Harold Parr, P. Kelly and P. House, with Robert Husband as guest soloist. Henry Phylm will accompany the choir on the organ and Alma Wittick will conduct.

YOU SAID TO ME

By ETHEL TULL

You said to me: "People are always coming to me with some new religious idea; why can't they leave me alone? I have my own religion, and I'm quite satisfied with it."

I wonder if one can have a "religion" that is so cut and dried one can never change one's thought about it. Nicolas Berdyaev, in "Truth and Revelation" speaks of the change that has taken place in the soul and mind of man since the earlier Christian ages, and the need for Christianity to be accepted and expressed differently now. He also speaks of a "religious philosophy" which is free and finds its support in spiritual experience rather than in social authority.

The changes in the social aspect of life in the world in my own lifetime have been startling. Modern means of transportation, education, and rapid exchange of thought, have brought the nations into such close proximity that they are in danger of destroying one another unless a new and higher "spiritual experience" brings them all together in love. The old sins of fear, suspicion, greed, dishonesty, and individualism, so much trouble, make the discord between the nations. As I am, so is my nation, so is my world. I need to change.

It has been said of Anna Bell Ritter, whose work on earth was ended recently, that she found a faith and lived it. "She knew the secret of listening to God..." The Cross was real to her... She knew that if you live your faith so compellingly that people change, then you have an ideology that can answer materialism. She mobilized her possessions, her time, her relationships, her devotion. "I'm through," she said, "with all half-way living."

That's a religion with which I could feel religious—to see the vision of the transfigured Christ, transfigured men, a transfigured world, and to give everything I have to helping to work it out.

HST, 'Father of the Bride' Has Tough Protocol Problem

Rev. Patric Hutton will wear these golden vestments when he officiates at wedding.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo.—The role of "father of the bride" is tough on any man. But for a man in the public eye like former president Harry S. Truman, whose daughter is also a celebrity, it calls for a job of protocol more ticklish than any he probably faced in the White House.

Almost everybody in Independence wants to go to Margaret Truman's wedding, and the little red brick Trinity Episcopal church where she will be married in April to Clifton Daniel seats less than 200.

Parish volunteers had begun polishing up the church several weeks ago, refinishing the pews, putting in a new altar, altar railing and tabernacle carpeting and enlarging the sanctuary. But they had no idea then that Margaret's wedding—in the same church where her parents were married in 1919—was in the offing.

"We just hoped to have it ready by Easter," explains the Rev. Patric L. Hutton, rector. There won't be much more room at the reception, either, if it's held at the Truman residence. It's an old-Victorian-style house with a large entrance hall, parlor, music room, den, big dining room and a screened porch that could be used if the weather's nice.

Most of Independence will have to be content to look on from the outside. But in homes and shops, townspeople are as excited as if they already had an invitation.

They tell you about her "unspoiled charm," and the fond contact she kept up with the hometown folks as she became more famous, and they want to get a look at Margaret's "young man."

"I'm thrilled to death for her," is a typical sentiment, voiced by Mrs. Arthur Horton who sang in the choir with Margaret when they were children. "It couldn't have happened to a sweeter person."

People are already calling the local gift shops to see if Margaret has picked a silver pattern.

"Others will show you the clipping from the Independence Examiner describing the wedding of Harry and Bess on June 28, 1919."

"It was a wedding of unusual beauty and interest," the story said, noting that "the bride wore a white ankle-length georgette gown, a white faillie hat and carried Aaron Ward roses," and that the church was decorated with flowers from the gardens of neighbors and friends.

"Mrs. Truman recalls that Margaret was less than three when she was in a wedding for the first time in 1926—as flower girl for Mrs. Truman's cousin, Louise Wells. In 1928 she was flower girl for another cousin, Jody Ragland, and since then has been bridesmaid for three Washington friends, Drucie Snyder, Jane Watson and Gloria Chavez, and for a childhood Independence friend, Mary Shaw. Although the engagement announcement broke ahead of time, it wasn't a surprise to everybody in Independence. Mr. Truman let relatives in on the secret after he had been to New York and met Daniel.

The former president's cousins, Misses Nelle and Ethel Noland, retired school teachers who live across the street from him, got the news early, they said, so they wouldn't have to wait until it made headlines.

And it's unlikely it was a secret to Vietta Gann, who has been cook at the Truman home since Margaret was two and whom Margaret has described as the "best cook in the world."

Vietta always has a batch of brownies ready when Margaret comes home. She's all set to bake an extra batch when she hears Margaret bringing Daniel, just to show she approves.

In bridesmaid's finery, Margaret Truman has been a member of the wedding for four of her friends, was a flower girl before she was three. Here she's with bride Jane Watson in 1949.

Scene of Margaret's wedding, Trinity Episcopal Church, was already being polished up by parish volunteers when plans for April nuptials were announced. Church seats less than 200.

Cut Down on Shopping List Counsellor Urges Brides

TORONTO (CP)—This may whisk the smell of orange blossoms right out from under a prospective bride's nose but, says a brides' counsellor, a trousseau should not be too frilly.

Miss Claire Dreier, counsellor for 19 years at a department store here, says most of the traditional musts on a bride's shopping list are unnecessary.

Most brides-to-be ignore an expert's advice to be practical, and spend their nest-eggs on delicate undies and elegant party dresses, she says.

"It's the one time in a girl's life . . ." they say.

That may be so, says Miss Dreier, but later on they will regret their happy-go-lucky spending spree unless the love of their life has a good bank account.

BE PRACTICAL

Miss Dreier, who says she set up the world's first brides' counselling service here, in 1937, says a bride-to-be should give herself a break and be practical.

She should forget romantic dreams and consider, instead, her clothing needs in married life. The trousseau she buys is not just for a honeymoon but for years of wear in a new life.

If the couple is to live in a warm climate, the trousseau should consist mainly of clothes in light-weight materials. If they plan to set up housekeeping in frigid temperatures, she shouldn't hesitate to pack some warm woolly snuggles, however unglamorous.

Though the idea may set her blushing, she should tuck away some maternity clothes. When a family is on the way the young wife may be struggling with an over-taxed budget.

RECOMMENDED ITEMS

A sensible trousseau includes several street, afternoon and house dresses, skirts, sports ensembles, an evening and a dinner gown, two suits, a warm—perhaps fur—coat, a topcoat, evening wrap and raincoat.

Lingerie in sets of three, a housecoat, and negligee should be sufficient.

Several blouses, sweaters, scarves, purses, gloves, handkerchiefs, costume jewelry, hosiery and an umbrella and evening bag should take care of accessory needs.

A versatile wardrobe has four hats, one each for sport, casual, afternoon and dinner wear. Foot comfort requires street, afternoon, walking and evening shoes and bedroom slippers.

Last but not least are aprons, shorts, slacks, a casual jacket and bathing suits.

This Woman Likes Wood

MONTREAL (CP)—Aline Gagnon, owner of a lumber mill at Matane, Que., believes many women would find the lumber business interesting.

The attractive, French-speaking, mill owner admits lumbering is an unusual occupation for a woman, but adds: "It's a very attractive business. In fact, I have a female secretary. She loves it, too."

Miss Gagnon, who attended the 48th annual Canadian Lumbermen's Association convention here said she was "a little nervous about talking business with men" when she became president of her family's mill two years ago. "But not now."

Miss Gagnon, who got her start 20 years ago as a secretary, says she is constantly busy at the mill, which employs 45 men during the sawing season and 20 in winter. Although the business is her main interest, Miss Gagnon also enjoys housekeeping and shopping.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Here's a Vacuum Cleaner That Is Flashlight Size

By PENNY SAVER

How would you like to have a handy vacuum cleaner that you can hold comfortably in one hand? That's just what you can have for as little as $3.95. The vacuum cleaners I saw are the same size as a regular flashlight, and switch on and off the same way, too. At the top, where the bulb would be, there's a right-angled attachment that is centred with a brisk brush. Flick on the cleaner, which is battery run, and brush the skirt, coat, or whatever it is you're cleaning, and the dust you raise will be immediately picked up and swished into the little vacuum bag attached.

It's light and can be carried anywhere, taking up very little space. The case is of ivory, or pastel plastic. It would make an ideal gift for a friend who's off on a little or large jaunt.

More and more sheath half-slips are arriving in town to team with this season's fashionable sheath. The latest ones I found are certainly reasonably priced. One of black taffeta is slim and fits well, and has two slits at the side. A wide band of gold embroidery decorates the bottom, and a gold print pattern is scattered all over. You won't mind it, now and then, if your slits peek out the slit in your sheath, 'cause it's so pretty. It costs $2.98.

Priced the same are the red or pastel taffeta ones that have a scalloped edge trimmed with narrow black lace. You'll get a lot of use out of these slips all year 'round.

Overblouses have the spotlight in a new shipment of sun-time clothes that has arrived in town. To wear with skirts, pedal pushers, slacks or Capri pants, they're casual or dress up, depending on the material or style. For the casual outfit, you'll like the waist-length cotton ones with fly-away collar and short sleeves. The waist-band is pleated about two inches deep and the sleeves are given an interesting note with tiny flap held by a button.

The longer overblouse style has three-quarter-length sleeves and an elasticized waistband. At back, there's a detachable belt, so that this one can be worn tucked in, too. These blouses are priced at $4.95 and $3.95, respectively.

Call me at 2-3131 and I'll tell you where to find the articles mentioned here in this corner... today or during past weeks.

This petit white square crown sailor is designed by Amy in Italian quintine straw.

In Step With Style

By NONA DAMASKE

"More About Hats"—This column is prompted by the fact that I hear so many small women say "all the new millinery is designed for the tall or larger woman."

The phrases "Bountiful Look," "Heavy Headed Look" and "Opulent Look" do create a picture of a large hat and we know that you gals of five-foot-two cannot wear a hat which will give you a top heavy look. If, when the new straws first arrived, you felt neglected, do look around again now. Many of the new shapes have been scaled down and present a new and exciting millinery picture for the more diminutive figure.

There is a mad desire by milliners to use fruit and flowers this season... If you are small do not think your hat must be unfurnished... just be sure the fruit or flowers are of the small variety.

A woman who is not of the average build has more of a problem to face when choosing a hat. A keen eye for balance and proportion is important.

Do try to spare a reasonable amount of time when you choose a hat... nearly every woman at one time has bought a hat in a hurry only to see it remain on the closet shelf because the style was wrong from the beginning.

Do not try on hats when you are intending to change your hair style very soon... wait until you have your hair-do, because a change of hair style can change the entire line of a hat.

Many of the lovely new shapes were found only in the higher priced lines of millinery at the beginning of the season but now many less expensive hats have all the new features. Large or small.

Black or White
To wear a hat
Is Right.

THE QUESTION BOX

Dear Denise: I will be getting in touch with you and will try and give you the information you are interested in.

Dear D. W.: I did see several two-piece bathing suits in the new summer lines but they are definitely in the minority.

No-Cook Easter Eggs for Young Tads; Basic Cream Easy to Make Someone has written an answer to "do-it-yourself" addicts, called "you do it, I'm tired". Following this line of thought here are directions for you to pass on to the small fry of the family for "no-cook candy Easter eggs." Beyond getting the kitchen muddled-up a bit they can get into no difficulty with this easy recipe from the Poultry Products Institute. The wise homemaker will have the young cooks make enough of the basic butter cream in the following recipe for her to store and have on hand for icing her next cake. This butter cream may be stored in a covered glass jar for a week or two in a cool place.

BASIC BUTTER CREAM

For Easter Eggs or Cake Icing—One-half cup butter, 3 cups sifted icing sugar, 1 egg.

Let the butter soften at room temperature until easy to cream. An electric beater or good hand beater may be used. Beat butter until fluffy, gradually add half the sugar. Beat smooth after each addition. Add unbeaten egg and mix thoroughly. Gradually beat in remaining sugar. This mixture should be smooth and creamy. Yields 2 cups.

TO MAKE EASTER EGGS

One cup basic butter cream, 1 cup sifted icing sugar, flavoring to suit (see note below), 1 egg white, slightly beaten, food coloring, coconut, nuts, maraschino cherries as desired.

Gradually mix the sugar into the basic butter cream. Divide candy into four portions, adding desired flavoring to each (see note below). Knead each portion on a baking board, liberally sprinkled with sifted icing sugar. Add more sugar as needed. When easy to handle roll candy into egg-shaped pieces of the desired size. Nuts, maraschino cherries or other fruit may be rolled in the centre of each candy egg. Dip into slightly beaten egg white and roll in white of tinted coconut. Candy itself may be colored if desired by adding a few drops of food coloring with the flavoring. Place on plate and cover with phlofin, waxed paper or aluminum foil and let stand a few hours or overnight in a cool place. Candy may be eaten at once but is better if flavors are allowed to blend.

Note: Suggested flavorings: 1 or 2 drops of peppermint; 1 to 2 squares melted chocolate and almond or vanilla extract to taste; ½ to 1 teaspoon vanilla extract;

¼ to ½ teaspoon almond extract; and add extra icing sugar if necessary. To make the desired spreading consistency. Chopped raisins, pineapple, cherries or nuts may be used. Combine desired flavorings mixed with icing.

Warmth, Comfort More Important Than High Style When Ladies Curl

By ELIZABETH FORBES

"A little bit of everything" was the way a laughing-constant in the annual ladies' bonspiel at the Victoria Curling Rink described apparel worn by the women curlers. The word "fashion" didn't come in to it, she said. It was warmth, and comfort that mattered.

Yet, looking over the big rink with an amateur eye, as far as curling is concerned, but with a woman's sense of knowing what looks right and what doesn't, I could pick out a good many smart curling costumes worn by women who definitely had a flair for clothes.

They looked to me to be tops as curlers, too!

BRIGHT COLORS

Red seemed to be a favorite color, in plain tones and bright plaids. Slacks, of course, were a "must," but even here the styles varied from slim, fitted ski pants through the various degrees of jodhpur lines to comfortable bags. Many of the contestants were bare-headed with short coiffures. Those who wore hats favored berets, head-hugging bonnets or peaked caps.

Mrs. Edna Manchester, Victoria, proudly wore a Scottish Glenngarry, glistening with buttons and crests of rinks and cities in which she has curled. A bright red shirt and navy slacks completed her striking outfit.

These buttons and badges, by the way, are worn by many curlers on their shirts, covering their jackets or in their hats. They get them, I was told, on an exchange basis, when they visit rinks away from their various homes.

Ski slacks, an Indian sweater she had knitted herself and a yellow robe made Mrs. Elleanaire Macdonald, Vancouver, stand out in the crowd. A knitted white pullover with curling figures around the middle was held by Mrs. Arthur Poyntz chose a heavy white wool sweater with high turtle neck and tartan slacks.

Grey and green plaid shirt, grey slacks and red peaked cap were the choice of Mrs. J. F. C. Blouey, and Mrs. Doris Shaw chose grey and blue plaid jacket with navy slacks. She confessed that she also was wearing an old sweater underneath. "My lucky sweater," she said.

Another curler announced proudly that she was wearing an old sweater that had once belonged to her daughter's boy friend (white cable stitch with red and black stripes at the wrists).

Tall and grey-haired, Mrs. Edith Miller, Vancouver, was outstanding in an all-nyl outfit, the tucked-in knitted blouse, covered with buttons and crests.

Vancouver's B.C. Electric Club all wore grey slacks with white heavy knitted coat sweater.

Seattle's Mrs. Mary Cruick-shank was a stylish picture in black slacks, black and white striped sweater with high neck. She confessed she was wearing brilliant red "long johns" and under them another suit of tan long johns.

Mrs. Peg McRae wore a red coat with blue collar, plaid shirt in the Robertson plaid ("my family tartan," she said). Mrs. E. Weese, Vancouver, chose a rose-toned jacket with hood lined in grey and rose stripes. On her head was a natty Angora wool bonnet in rose tones. Navy ski pants completed this ensemble.

Mrs. A. F. Speedie, Vancouver, had large leather knee-patches on her beige ski pants. An Indian sweater she had knitted and an Angora wool beret in tan and white completed the outfit.

Accessories Highlight Showing Of Spring's Newest Fashions

The co-ordinated look of the costume was stressed, Thursday afternoon, at a showing of spring fashions at Toojays Limited. Accessories were highlighted by showing basic suits and changing them to suit the hour and occasion with various hats, gloves, handbags and jewelry.

Nona Damaske appeared, looking ready for any dressy afternoon occasion, in a slim suit of the fashionable Florentine blue color. With it, she modelled a navy blue hat covered with white lace appliques and touched with bright red cherries. Her gloves were white, with fancy eyelet embroidery inserts and her bag and shoes were red calf leather.

ACCESSORIES CHANGED

The same suit worn again by Nona Damaske, took on a more casual appearance with conservative accessories. Ready to go shopping, this time, Nona wore a straw skimmer hat and carried the popular new bucket bag in navy blue.

Colors bright, red and yellow were combined stunningly in an ensemble modelled by Pat Gannon. Her sports suit, of Austrian wool, had a vibrant red knit top trimmed with black and white checked wool from which the slim skirt was also fashioned. Her cartwheel-brimmed breton hat of gay daffodil yellow, although a sharp contrast to the red and the Kellogg's multi-million-dollar breakfast food industry started over 50 years ago in this building. Founder of cereal fortune began new life at 40.

Three Lives of W. K. Kellogg Subject of Vivid Biography

Reviewed by NORMAN CRIBBENS
Times Business Editor

THE ORIGINAL HAS THIS SIGNATURE — By Horace B. Powell, Prentice-Hall Inc., Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey. 358 Pages, $5.

The old cliché, Life Begins at Forty, was literally true in the life of W. K. Kellogg, the man who made millions out of corn flakes. For him the forties were not flagging years but the beginning of a second life—a life in which, against all odds, he built up an enormous cereal industry and amassed one of the biggest fortunes of this century.

And even then Kellogg was not ready to retire. At 70 he started a third life in which for 21 years he financed and operated a philanthropic foundation designed "to help people help themselves."

This absorbing, at times almost racy story by Horace B. Powell deals in some detail with the three lives of W. K. Kellogg, beginning with his Puritan childhood in the home of austere religious parents and describing his early adventures as a brush salesman, sanitarian employee, general handyman and bookkeeper.

The story of how he built up a huge industry from the tiny cornflake is dramatic, almost movie-type material. Yet the picture of Kellogg as a warm-hearted philanthropist suffers a little in the frankly recorded instances of harsh treatment meted out to unfortunate salesmen. It is not until the later chapters that he emerges as a generally benevolent figure.

Most of the incidents related took place at Battle Creek, Michigan, where the Kelloggs' lasted just one hundred years ago—in 1856. Battle Creek was then a village of little more than a thousand people, little dreaming it would one day become the world centre of the breakfast food industry. The industry grew up in Battle Creek because of its sanitarian. And the sanitarian was established by the Seventh Day Adventists to which the Kelloggs family gave devout allegiance. In fact, the history of W. K. Kellogg and the cornflake industry

An English schoolboy found a one-cent British Guiana stamp in his attic in 1873 and sold it for $1.50 because it looked ugly and in poor condition. When last sold in 1940, the stamp, the only one of its kind ever found, brought more than $40,000 to its owner and now has a book value of $50,000.

The more than 9,000,000 stamp collectors in the United States include such well-known persons as Herbert Hoover, Adolphe Menjou and Lily Pons.

is rooted in the history of the Adventists who disapproved of hearty meat breakfasts.

The injunctions of the Adventists during his formative years left indelible marks on W. K. Kellogg's life. His strict, almost rigid attitudes on morals, his altruism and honesty, perhaps even much of his modesty, stemmed from the teachings of this minority group.

He and his brother, a doctor, discovered the corn flake while seeking a more digestible substitute for bread, not knowing at the time that they were inventing a breakfast food.

Nearly five years have elapsed since W. K. Kellogg died on October 6, 1951, in his 91st year. But the famous signature, printed on millions of cornflake boxes, is seen in the stores and homes of many nations, and the Foundation he established in his 71st year continues pouring out philanthropic funds at the rate of five million dollars a year.

The story is vividly written and at times takes on the characteristics of a novel. Yet the material and the abundant illustrations that go with it bear the stamp of authenticity and sincerity.

AT THE WHEEL with Hans Gruber

A renewed and growing success of the small, practical, efficient and dependable English-made cars is assured on this continent. The American manufacturers, with but two possible exceptions, have stopped catering to the "marginal" motorist, of whom there must be vast numbers.

The fact is that there no longer is any such thing as a small or low-priced American car. The smallest and cheapest products of the "Big Three," namely Ford, Chrysler and GM, are a far cry from the simple utility cars they once were. The Chevrolet, the Ford, the Plymouth are now very large, heavy and super-powerful luxury cars.

The Chrysler Corporation, more even than the others, have completely abandoned the small-car market. Their smallest car is the Plymouth, which is, in actual fact, larger in every exterior and interior dimension except weight than GM's Oldsmobile "88" series. Chevrolet's smallest six-cylinder engine is today more powerful than Cadillac's V-8 was in 1948, not to speak of their current V-8 engine, which is equal in power to the 1954 Buick Century, and surpasses the 1952 Cadillac.

LEADING WHERE? Plymouth's V-8 engine is "hotter" today than the fabulous "Fire-Power" V-8 of Chrysler of 1952, and today's Ford is more powerful than the 1953 Lincoln.

Where this is going to lead is a mystery. At a time when the obvious need is for somewhat smaller, more sensibly-powered cars, the big manufacturers instead are bringing out new models at the upper end to surpass in power, luxury and price even their "ordinary" luxury cars. Ford has come up with the "Continental," equal in price to the Rolls-Royce; Cadillac is about to announce the availability of one of the "Motorama" dream cars, the Eldorado Brougham. And Chrysler is marketing a new version of the "300," (B), with 340 h.p. No mention, however, of a simplified Chevrolet or Plymouth or Ford.

The growing potential market for the small imported car is obvious. The cheapest domestic car available here in Victoria is scarcely under $3,000, which is too close to the total annual earnings of a large number of people.

MERIT INSPECTION There are, however, two domestic cars of American derivation which merit the closest inspection by the economy-minded motorist, even though they are no cheaper to buy than any other American car. They are the Studebaker Champion and the Rambler, the latter marketed under both Nash and Hudson labels, since the amalgamation of those two firms into American Motors. Both these cars are refreshingly different from the "Big Three," and merit an early future column to themselves.

At the same time, the products of the "Big Three" will also be discussed in some detail soon; their critique will reveal that they have simply become too good to serve as basic transportation.

JAMES SCOTT'S BOOK TALK

Irish-American Novel Is Tough and Worthy

With inadvertent appropriateness, it was on the 17th of March that I finished a new novel by Dorothy Salisbury Davis called "Men of No Property." This is, above all, a book about Irishmen. Not Irishmen in Ireland but Irishmen in New York. It is also a historical novel. It covers a very turbulent period in both the history of New York City and the U.S.A.—from 1840 to the beginning of the Civil War.

Now Mrs. Davis was known to me before as a writer of rather slick detective fiction (A Gentle Murderer, The Clay Hand etc. etc.) and I confess that I picked up her first attempt at historical fiction pretty well convinced that this would be a routine performance. The first few chapters seemed to justify my expectations, but then Mrs. Davis seemed to get the bit in her teeth and away she went running a straight, hard, true course through, as I have said, a crucial period of U.S. history.

The result is a rough, tough realistic book, full of color, of real people, and harsh ideas. Mrs. Davis tackles the New York, Tammany-inspired mobs, the Southern intriguers, the charlatans, the ignorant, the vicious and the good with a very firm hand and as I set this book down on the seventeenth of the Irish I felt that I knew a good deal more about both this stormy race and their impact on the United States.

FLOODS OF SPRING This is a very worthy book and I hope it does not get completely smothered in the welter of Spring publications.

It came to my hands in a bundle of what looked like very mediocre books. I have not yet got through them all, but the packet included Profiles in Courage, described as "decisive moments in the lives of celebrated Americans" and written by Senator John F. Kennedy.

Then there was The Long Night by science reporter Martin Caidin. This one is a story of what happens when an atomic bomb drops in a U.S. city of 500,000 people. It is informative and alerting but awfully dull in a slick kind of way. Finally there was a big volume called Freedom or Death, written by a former Greek Minister of Education, Nikos Kazantzakis whom the late Thomas Mann called one of the greatest writers of modern Europe. This is a story of the struggle of little island of Crete to escape from the Turks and return to Greece. It is told on the grand scale and is a not easily-digested mouthful.

These books are only a sampling of the kind of packages which come to a book reviewer's desk in slack and busy times alike. From the presses of the world, books—some good, some mediocre, some terrible—come tumbling out into the book-buying market. Books about almost any people, any country get distributed in the U.S.A. and thence wend their way across the border to us.

This is a good thing, but in so doing they swamp our native products, and that, I think, is not so good.

However, don't mistake me. I am not suggesting that for the sake of protecting the tender plant which is Canadian literature, we should erect any type of trade barrier, which would stifle the tide. Not at all. If we are going to combat this, we have to do it at home. That is, write more interesting books about ourselves.

WILL SELL

For instance, take this yarn about the atom bomb. This will sell a fair number of copies because the subject is topical. And sure enough it took no great genius to get the idea of writing on such a theme. But would a Canadian tackle it? Well, no Canadian did and yet cities like, say, Vancouver, are as likely targets as the one the author dreamed up in the U.S.A.

What I am getting at is that every day our writers seem to miss the kind of subjects which publishers like to see on their lists. Those Irish in New York. Why there is just as good a story in the Irish in Toronto and lots of source material to work from, but nobody has done it yet, nor is contemplating it either as far as I know. And what about this senator who is writing about those he calls America's great ones? Why not some great moments in the lives of distinguished Canadians?

You see, it's really very easy. But our boys and girls in the writing game don't seem to have any instinct for timely topics.

Visionary Design Includes Gallery's Future Progress

By COLIN GRAHAM

And so the gallery in its good fortune reaches another stage in its development. The Rotary-sponsored competition for the design of our proposed new wing has closed, and as readers of last Saturday's paper will have seen for themselves, we have had presented to us an extremely elegant and ingenious plan to work on.

It says much, I feel, for the present state of architecture in this city that we could with confidence limit the competition to Victoria architects, knowing that with the talent we have in the city we were bound to get a good design.

This confidence was well founded, as the assessors of the competition were able to state in their report that the designs entered were well up to present national and even international standards. So it was not mere politeness when, in thanking the Rotary Club for so important and generous a contribution to the gallery's progress, we were able to pay our respectful compliments to the competing architects for the quality of their contributions, each scheme having at least one outstanding feature to recommend it.

STIMULATING The problems facing us in the development of the Moss street site are of a stimulating complexity. The integration of a 20th-century wing with a gracious mansion nearly three quarters of a century old is merely one of them.

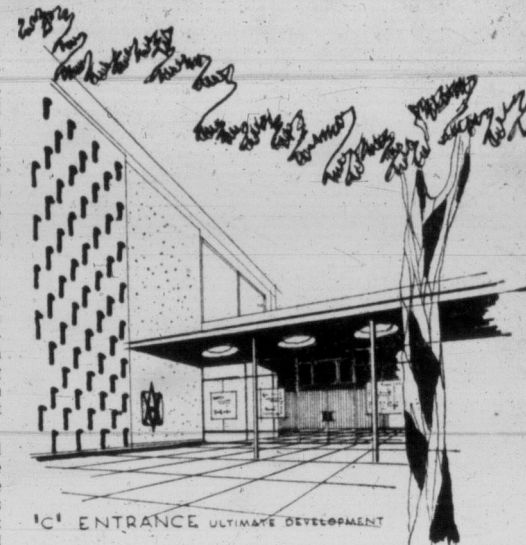

No one watching the growth of western Canada can doubt that in a fairly short time the development of Victoria, particularly as a capital city, will not merely warrant but require the growth of an art gallery considerably beyond the dimensions of a single wing. With any luck our permanent collection alone will before long be requiring a wing to itself.

Thus it would be criminally short-sighted were we to ask of the architects that they provide us simply with plans for an isolated wing.

MAKE WEST OF SITE

What we did ask of them was a plan for a $35,000 wing together with an indication of how such a piece of architecture could be developed and expanded to form part of large gallery which would make the most of the very fine site, we are so fortunate as to possess. It is, incidentally, a considerably larger and more imposing site than one is apt to imagine when visiting the gallery casually.

The architects' problem, then, was to plan a much more complex scheme than a mere wing.

Proposed entrance to final Art Gallery development. (From the winning competition design: Architects, Clack, Clayton and Pickstone).

and to plan so that the result would be a piece of civic architecture that would be an asset to the city and at the same time would destroy as few as possible of the very attractive landscape features we already have—the fine trees, rock outcroppings, grass areas, and so forth.

It has been encouraging to say the least to find that we can in fact more or less have our cake and eat it—build ultimately a gallery of imposing dimensions and still have enough space over to set it in effective landscape surroundings.

In a matter as complex as this it should be easy to see why we could scarcely ask the competing architects to produce a final and complete design. We were entitled to ask little more than a working indication as to how our rough requirements could be met.

Before we reach the final details of the solution with our very able winning architects, Clack, Clayton and Pickstone, we shall have much researching and thinking to do on our own part, so that we can arrive at the clearest possible picture of our needs, present and probable.

Much has been developed in the last decade in the field of gallery operation both here and in Europe, and we intend to take advantage of the lessons provided by all worthwhile innovations.

Spanish Sarita Montiel Hollywood Cinderella

BY HENRY GRIS
HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Those movie-struck señoritas of Spain who were beginning to doubt once again believe in the movie Cinderella story.

The girl who restored their faith in the miracle of discovery by faraway Hollywood is Sarita Montiel who went home to Spain a movie star from head to toe.

Sarita, who hails from beautiful Granada and is as fiery as they come down there, began working in Spanish movies at 13 when a film director heard her sing and saw her in a religious procession on the streets of Sevilla. One day she packed up and left for Mexico, seeking wider movie experience.

Mexico did well by her, but 10 pictures later Sarita was eager for more conquests. Her break came when Burt Lancaster offered her a role opposite Gary Cooper and himself in "Vera Cruz." That role led to her great new adventure, the co-starring part opposite Mario Lanza in the recently completed "Serenade."

SHE IS HERSELF

It was to rest up after this picture that Sarita went home for a visit, a full-fledged international movie celebrity with a Warner Brothers contract.

President of the Victoria Music Festival, J. F. K. English—who is also president of the Victoria Symphony Society—and adjudicators at the festival instrumental classes were greatly impressed with the work of the school orchestras, particularly that of the Central Junior High School orchestra.

As a result, in order that more Victorians should hear this fine group of young musicians, the orchestra will play a 15-minute program immediately prior to concerts by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon and Monday evening at the Royal Theatre.

GRUBER CONDUCTS

Smetana's 'Moldau' Reflects Spirit of Czech Nationalism

By HANS GRUBER

A quick review of the unhappy lot of the Czech people is relevant to the opening composition of the final pair of subscription concerts tomorrow afternoon and Monday night. Through the 19th century, and until the end of the First World War, the Czechs were incorporated, against their will, into the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Although theirs was, and is, one of the oldest and most distinguished cultures of any of the European peoples, the Habsburg imperial regime tried to suppress the Czechs' nationalistic tendencies, and even suppressed the use of their beautiful and highly-developed language.

For a brief twenty years, between 1918 and 1939, the Czechs enjoyed independence with the creation of the Republic of Czechoslovakia, which, under their first president, the great statesman-philosopher, Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, became a prosperous model democracy in the image of the United States, rich in natural resources and in the most modern industrial productive capacity.

It may be said that Czechoslovakia was the only country created after the first war which contributed to the world's good rather than as the opposite. Other peoples who gained their independence at that time suffered under the insurmountable handicap of corrupt governments. What has happened since to Czechoslovakia is recent history and fresh in our minds.

In 1939 the Nazis ended the dream-come-true, and when they were annihilated, scarcely less terrible oppressors took the country over, and to this day, of course, the Czechs are subject to the tender mercies of their Slavic "brothers," the Russian Communists.

The history of the Czechs makes unhappy reading.

Bedrich Smetana, a Czech patriot of the 19th century, was one of the foremost composers of his age. His priceless comic opera, "The Bartered Bride," stands beside Mozart's "Figaro" as the finest of operatic comedy in existence.

To concert audiences throughout the world he bequeathed his famous and beautiful tone poem, "Vltava," or "Moldau," which is part of a larger cycle entitled "Ma Vlast," or "My Country." Smetana wrote this music while in enforced exile in Sweden, whence he had been banished by the imperial regime because his music threatened to reawaken the national consciousness of the Czechs.

It is a little known fact that the great melody in the "Moldau" is not entirely original and Smetana's own. In this marvellous portrayal of the river Moldau, which flows through Bohemia, Smetana used what was then a Hebrew folksong, and which has since become the national anthem of the Zionists and of the young state of Israel. This song is called the "Havkavah." Smetana thought it the best possible and universal portrayal in music of homesickness and yearning.

Tschaikowsky's 4th Symphony is, of course, as well known a composition as exists.

He took here a leaf from Beethoven's book and built this symphony around a "fate motif," with which the symphony opens—it is a triple fanfare from the horns and trumpets which recurs throughout the gigantic first movement, and is quoted again towards the end of the symphony in the last movement, for the sake of cyclic unity.

Tschaikowsky dedicated this work to "my best friend," who was a mysterious lady by the name of Nadzda von Meek, and who was a lifelong benefactress to the composer, without the two ever having met.

The second movement is based upon a Russian folksong, first played as an oboe solo, with a middle section in the form of a Russian dance.

The third movement is a breath-taking stunt of the sort that only Tschaikowsky could bring off. In this movement the strings never once use the bows, but pluck the strings only, and this "pizzicato ostinato" is emulated by the short and staccato notes in the wind and brass. The fourth and final movement brings this symphony to a fittingly melodramatic finish. The final work to "my best friend," who was a mysterious lady by the name of Nadzda von Meek, and who was a lifelong benefactress to the composer, without the two ever having met.

Jan Peerce, the leading tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Association, will appear in concert at the Royal on April 3.

The beloved American tenor opened his current season by appearing with the San Francisco Opera Company where he sang several performances of the title role in Gounod's "Faust" and Ottavio in Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

In addition to his Metropolitan performances in 1955-56 which will include such famous Peerce characterizations as the title role in Gounod's "Faust," "The Duke" in Rigoletto, "Riccardo" in The Masked Ball and others, he will also appear again

Bach Aria Group at that festival were hailed by the international press as one of the outstanding events in music.

While in Europe, Peerce also recorded Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" at the RCA-Victor studios in Rome, Italy, with his colleague, Metropolitan Opera soprano Lucia Albanese, in the title role.

During his stay in the Eternal City, Peerce presented a rare record collection of liturgical music of all faiths at a special audience at St. Peter's to Pope Pius XII, in behalf of the Musicians Emergency Fund as a tribute to Harriet and Fritz Kreisler.

Peerce has announced a particularly beautiful program for his appearance in Victoria. It will include several of the great arias which he has sung with such distinction in his Metropolitan roles this season.

Major Awards Made In Festival Wind-Up

BY AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

In one of the best Rose Bowl contests since its inauguration of the Greater Victoria Music Festival, Clemency Perrins, soprano, was declared winner of the coveted B.C. Electric Vocal trophy at the final grand concert Friday night in First United Church.

Competing with her were Merna Jenkin, mezzo soprano, and Michael Rogers, tenor. Miss Jenkin and Mr. Rogers were winners in their respective operatic classes.

Mrs. Perrins, the former Clemency Ord, was a frequent winner in junior vocal classes in pre-war festivals. Her selections last night were "Rejoice Greatly," from Handel's "Messiah," and Purcell's "Hark, the Echoing Air."

CITY MEDALLION WINNER

The Victoria City Medallion, premier trophy for pianists which is competed for in a special championship class, was awarded to a 14-year-old Vancouver girl, Janet Thom, for her brilliantly musical performance of the first movement of the Beethoven C Major Concerto. The presentation was made by Mayor Percy Scourrah.

Her partner, 16-year-old Catherine Arakawa, who played the orchestra part at the second piano, also appeared as soloist in a concert movement with Miss Thom accompanying.

Competing for the medallion were Joanne Dawson and Florence Goward.

A large audience attended this final program, and apart from the two championship contests, heard the Meistersingers win by a narrow margin over the Arion Male Choir, both ensembles and their directors receiving high commendation from the adjudicator. Marks were 173 and 171 respectively.

Special performances were given by entrants selected by the adjudicators from the week's classes. These were Donald Costello, winner in a speech art class for boys under eight; John Allan, speech art winner for boys under 14; Bernard Goward, cellist; Madonna McCabe, dramatic soprano, and the Canadian Services College of Royal Roads.

Award of the J. F. K. English bursary for maintaining a high standard in a number of classes was made to Merna Jenkin.

CBC award for the choir receiving top marks was received by Mrs. J. Roberto Wood on behalf of First United Church Ladies' Choir.

Alfred Prescott Memorial bursaries were awarded to Central Junior High School orchestra and the Victoria High School band.

Victoria Musical Art Society bursaries for performers' piano concerto class and for top junior vocalist went to Janet Thom and Shirley Russell.

Patsy Loft, Gillian Gerry, Lynne Hammond and Margaret McEwen received Victoria Registered Music Teachers' junior bursaries. The intermediate bursary was awarded to Judith Andrews.

In keeping with the policy of providing bursaries out of festival proceeds, chairman J. F. K. English made awards for outstanding work to Joyce Hunt, Judith Andrews, Gail Morrison, Gordon Britton, Jean Hammond and Florence Goward.

Robert Whitehead and the Hecht-Lancaster Company have obtained the American stage rights to Terence Rattigan's current London hit, "Separate Tables" and will present it here early next fall.

"Separate Tables" consists of two acts entitled "Table by the Window" and "Table No. 7," provided Eric Portman and Margaret Leighton with the plum of London's 1954-55 season and is in its second capacity year.

Ship Cafe Gains International Reputation

By TONY DICKSON

They serve memories and food that evokes memories aboard the Princess Mary. Strong in both tradition and substance is the "ship cafe" here which surpasses any eating place in Canada for unique atmosphere which, like a questing gull, hovers over the distinctive land-bound vessel.

In three years, since opening in 1953 the restaurant vessel has performed an unparalleled switch; it's eaten its way into the gastronomic savvy of people from every continent in the world. Here's a sampling of what they write in the guest book: "Wish we had it in Vancouver... lovely... delicious... terrific... just as good as Las Vegas... very suave."

But before delving into the delightful food, let's take a retrospective peek at the cafe itself.

Has Same Customers

Built in Paisley, Scotland, in 1910, she's as alive today as she ever was; and among her customers are some of the numberless thousands who were once passengers.

In 1953 old age overtook the once proud Princess; her Edwardian hull became tired and her hull was converted into a grim thought—a hog-fuel barge.

But the rest of her lived on to win new fame as B.C.'s only ship cafe.

We walked up the gang-food was so good we nearly grabbed and kissed the hand of cordial waitress "Vi" Western.

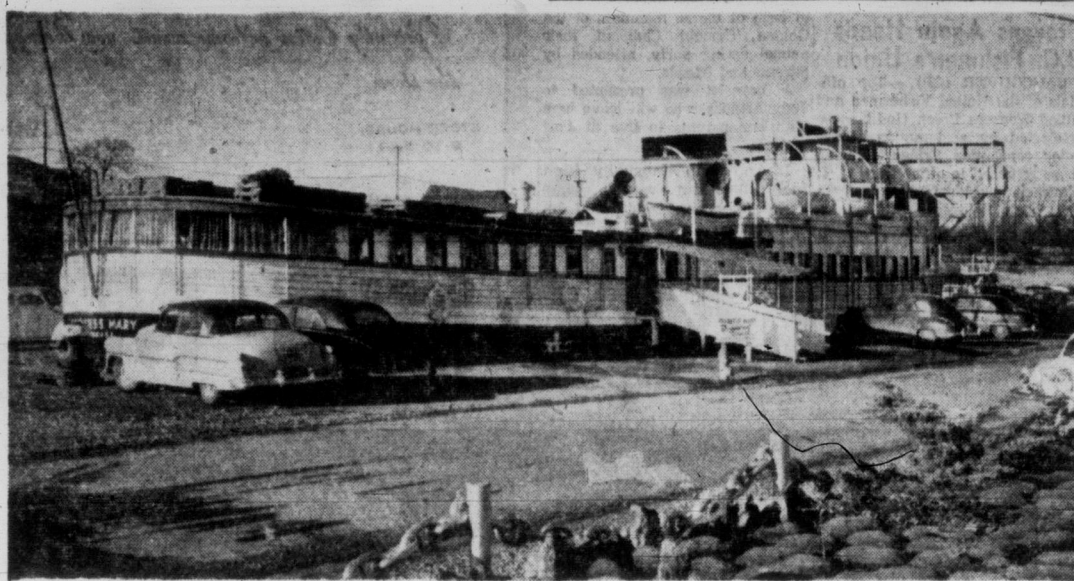

Point is, restaurant manager G. G. (Dusty) Miller didn't even know we were in the place. Proprietors have been known to prepare somewhat sumptuous servings, eliminating the burned soup.

guests can be served at one time.

In the entrance to the salon is a built-in mural of live angel fish, and blow-fish not quite so alive. Coastal sea charts and a larger map of the coastal area for the non-nautically minded cover portions of the wall.

When the service bell rings,

Fifty years ago, or more, Victoria had a reputation up and down the coast for its eating places. This slipped to almost nothing in the 1930's and 40's. But in the last 10 years a number of individuals have made a decided effort to give the lower island area something distinctive, something special and something different in the way of eating, both in food and in atmosphere.

THE OLD PRINCESS MARY is aground as a ship cafe and she surpasses in atmosphere and at least equals in sea food anything San Francisco's Fishermen's Wharf has to offer. She's popular Princess still.

when they know a word or six will be written about their place.

Operation of the cafe is a "natural" with Dusty, as he is internationally known. He has a master mariner's ticket and has merely transferred his love of food at sea to love of food ashore.

Menus are personalized and distinctive, calculated to activate the salivary glands. Place mats which are inscribed with verses dedicated to the "Princess of Good Cheer" are whisked out of the place by souvenir-conscious customers at an alarming rate.

In case you think the build-up on the cafe is over-stated, records show that last Saturday evening alone the Mary catered to 739 guests, of which 291 had the foresight to make reservations!

The cafe is out-of-the-way, on the property of Island Tug & Barge, off Johnson Street, where it is the centre of numerous large buoys, ship's anchors and all the paraphernalia of a bustling waterfront enterprise. This has strong appeal to customers.

'Middied' Waitresses

There's so much to say about the unique establishment one almost gets lost trying. Waitresses are "muddled," that is, have the simple attractive blue and white striped uniforms which had their origin with the Royal Navy of years ago.

Atmosphere of the "ship" is that of ship throughout. Chief steward Jack Galbraith greets you on entrance under the "purser" sign, near the "auto deck" which—and we think it's humorous—points outside to the parking lot which takes 150 cars, ample for the trade. About 180 plank the other evening to see what shoreside ships served.

After testing we are now of the school of slaver and drool! Speciality of the Princess Mary is seafood, so we had a "grilled 18-ounce red brand Kamloops porterhouse steak," and accompaniments, such as milk.

After such a steak done to exact specifications and even served with a little flag-like affair stuck in it saying "rare," "medium or whatever the order indicated, we felt that roundup time in the valley is one of the noblest traditional institutions. The

Commonwealth Rifle Competition

TORONTO (CP)—A new annual international small-bore rifle competition, involving sea cadets in Canada and eight other Commonwealth countries, has been organized, it was announced Wednesday.

The contest, to commemorate the 1955 diamond jubilee of the Navy League of Canada, will have sea cadets in Canada, England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Australia, New Zealand, Rhodesia and South Africa shooting from Jan. 1 to Oct. 31 each year. The three top teams from each will send their score sheets and targets to Navy League authorities for final scoring by the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association.

Suppositories or Ointment

When the service bell rings, indicating meals ready, it's not the usual clang of a cheap hotel night-desk bell, but the melodious ring of a ship's bell, tolling off the hours. Service is fast, although the air of quiet, cabin dignity is maintained.

Incorporated in the old Princess are parts of several historic vessels which have ranged the globe. Her upper eating structure—a few feet above the main dining room—is a recent edition, reconstructed superstructure from an oil tanker, the Surinam, a Venezuela vessel towed here by Island Tug.

All Is Ship-Shape

In the galley, which sparkles, hangs the sign: "If you are not proud of these foods do not serve them." So efficient is the operation there, and so neat the layout, it would make the average housewife blush from chagrin.

"Dishes that are served are the ones I like myself," says mariner Miller. All foods are fried in vegetable shortening; no meat fats.

The 5,000 sq. ft. restaurant—one somehow hesitates to call it a cafe—is designed primarily for family groups. Children abound. They like the simple dishes, such things as hamburger and chips or halibut and chips.

Food? Yes indeed. Steaks served average 150 a night. The eating place is the biggest seller of curried shrimp, prawns and scallops in Canada. Most fancied are oysters, 40 gallons a week. In the past nine months 5,000 pounds of clam meat has gone the way of all flesh, and 1,500 gallons of nectar. Scallops only are imported, from Nova Scotia. All other sea food is local.

Success in the sea food field is because turnover is fast, guaranteeing freshness.

Muted music fills the air, and daily except Monday and Tuesday British import Regie Stone plays the organ 12.30 to 1.30 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m. He played in one of the largest seaside theatres in England, so, logically, enjoys atmosphere and location of the Princess.

The restaurant employs 54 persons including one of the cutest little Chinese girls you've ever seen, who looks after salads.

You can eat there from 60 cents—many do for breakfast—or go as high as you can stomach. Actually, costs are reasonable, but food is so good one has a tendency, literally, to expand!

MRS. HELEN COOPER... victim of hypnotism?

IN SERIOUS CONDITION

Boy Badly Injured In Fall From Bus

LAKE COWICHAN — Condition of an eight-year-old boy who fell from a school bus two miles west of here Friday afternoon was reported today as "still serious."

Bobby Gunderson, Honey-moon Bay, suffered extensive skull fractures when he and a companion, Billy Janky, eight, also of Honey-moon Bay, were thrown from the bus on South Shore road while being taken home from school.

Young Gunderson is in King's Daughter's Hospital in Duncan, and the other boy is being treated for shock at his home.

The two boys were sitting beside the emergency door when it opened.

"The case is still under investigation," said Cpl. Don Thompson, RCMP. "It has not yet been established how the door came open."

Driver of the bus was William Budd, regular driver for Lake Cowichan School District 66. The bus was not traveling fast when the accident occurred, police said.

A spokesman at the Lachine base said that the terse message gave only the time of the vice-regal craft's flight over the pole. There was no word regarding visibility.

A 20-pound canister was dropped over the pole to commemorate the governor-general's visit.

It carried instructions in English, French and Danish reading: "Will you please report your discovery to the principal citizen of your community who, in turn, is requested to inform the secretary of state for external affairs, Ottawa, Canada, of the place and date. A reward to the finder is promised."

WINNIE IN COLORFUL WEEKEND FEATURE

Woman Hypnotist Defends Powers

Can Cure Disease, Alcoholism Says Court-Banned Spell-Caster

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Madame Dorothy Westlake, the Vancouver hypnotist who is said to have been hired to hypnotize a Victoria woman into returning to her divorced husband, believes most human ills can be cured by hypnotic treatment.

"I believe all disease can be controlled by the mind," she told The Times from her home at 2560 West Broadway, Vancouver, today.

Mrs. Westlake advertises herself as "Canada's leading lady hypnotist." She has set up in practice as a consultant and claims to have cured "many, many people" of alcoholisms, insomnia, stuttering and all kinds of nervous disorders.

Madame Westlake, an Englishwoman, refused to discuss Friday's Supreme Court action in which 28-year-old Mrs. Helen Emma Cooper of 887 Cowper Avenue, Victoria, was granted an injunction to restrain her former husband, Thomas Amiel Cooper, and Madame Westlake from "interfering" with her.

Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson granted the injunction after Mrs. Cooper filed an affidavit stating that she was hypnotized by Madame Westlake in a room at the Empress Hotel.

"Mr. Cooper's lawyers have asked me to make no reference to this case," Madame Westlake said. "Further litigation is pending."

Speaking in a low-toned, musical voice, Madame Westlake told how she first became interested in hypnotism as a young girl in England.

"I knew a number of spiritualists," she said, "and they told me I was a natural medium. From there I moved on to the study of hypnosis and the more I practised it the more I am convinced it is a cure for most of the world's ills today."

"Even wars are the result of cumulative grievances—in the human mind—frustrations, disappointments, feelings of insecurity, lack of recognition... If all the peoples of the world could be taught to think properly there would be no wars."

Cures claimed

Madame Westlake came to Canada after the last war, was first in Toronto before coming to the coast. She claims to have been granted a licence by the B.C. government to practise hypnotism.

"Ninety-five per cent of human beings are hypnotic subjects," she said. "The more intelligent and imaginative, the better they subject."

"I have cured many, many people of alcoholism which is caused by emotional imbalance. The people I have cured are now happy people, able to enjoy drink in moderation without any desire to drink to excess."

"I do it by planting the idea in their minds that they should not degrade their bodies in this way—and the idea sticks."

Madame Westlake says she can also remove sorrow from the minds of bereaved men and women. She says most illnesses are caused by mental disorders.

"For instance most people are told in childhood that if they get their feet wet they will catch cold. They catch cold because the idea has been planted in their minds."

"When I treat a person by hypnosis I change their think-

Oil Slick Studied In Hunt for Plane

Upper Campbell Lake Area Also Scoured After Loggers Report Treetops Sheared

VANCOUVER (BUP)—Samples of an oil slick found floating in British Columbia's Georgia Strait near where an RCAF T-33 jet trainer is believed to have crashed Thursday will be analyzed today to determine if it came from the jet.

Officials of the RCAF's search and rescue division began arrangements this morning for a two-quart sample of mixed sea water and oil to be analyzed by senior chemist E. C. Wilkinson of the Shell Oil Co.

Rumors of a possible crash in the Upper Campbell Lake area also were being checked today by both air and ground searches.

Reports of loggers in the vicinity hearing a "swish," and of seeing 60-foot trees with the top three or four feet broken, prompted the Campbell River Ground Observer Corps to send a party to the area on foot.

These are the last remaining clues of many reported since the search started at noon Thursday. Dense fog and cloud continued to hamper the operation, in which 500 men are taking part.

Reports Friday of an aircraft wing being sighted in water south of Campbell River proved to be false.

Aboard the plane for a routine training flight from Comox air base were FO James E. Miller, 23, formerly of Victoria, and FO Gerald Stubbs, 32, formerly of Winnipeg. Both lived at Comox with their families.

Mrs. Catherine Pilling of New Westminster was arrested after police chased a car driven by a woman dressed as a man. There were also two men in the auto.

The car was later found abandoned. Police said in it they found a .32-calibre shell, two empty shopping bags and a mask.

Mrs. Pilling is one of two persons awaiting trial for the $26,000 holdup of a Canadian Bank of Commerce branch here last November.

Saanich Man Wins $56,000 In Fantastic 'Irish' Race

Vancouver Widow Gets $140,000 In Sweepstakes

The history of the Grand National and the remarkable woman who stages it are told in a special article in Weekend Magazine in this issue today.

The most fantastic finish in the history of England's famed Grand National Steeplechase today poured $56,000—every penny free of income taxes—into the pockets of Saanich shipyard worker Horace Whiteoak, 3795 Cedar Hill Road.

The Queen Mother's horse, Loch Devon, fell with victory in sight, 30 yards from the winning post. Gentle Moya, on which Mr. Whiteoak held an Irish Sweep ticket, roared from fifth place to second in the last 50 yards of the race.

$1,400 for an "also ran" and $56,000 in second-place winnings.

Winner of the race was E.S.B. Royal Tan was third.

E.S.B.'s victory brought $140,000 in Irish Sweep money to a 43-year-old Vancouver widow, Mrs. Helen Orsloets, 3387 East 28th Ave. She is a dishwasher in Hudson's Bay Company store's staff restaurant.

Was Given Ticket by Friend

Mrs. Orsloets was given the ticket by a friend, John Bubich. She will use the money to educate her seven-year-old daughter and to visit her sick mother in Vienna.

Mrs. Orsloet wouldn't leave her job when friends brought news of her fortune. Finally persuaded to take the day off, she said: "I'll be back Monday."

"I'm not thinking yet—I'm just shaking," Mr. Whiteoak told a Times reporter minutes after the race ended this morning at Aintree.

He didn't listen to the race broadcast from England. He went to bed—and rose—at the usual time.

He lives with his mother, Mrs. Grace Whiteoak, and his sister, Rita.

The 40-year-old Yarrow's electrician was one of two British Columbians and three other Canadians who won $56,000 on second-place Gentle Moya.

The others are: Lloyd Goch, 4472 Parliament Crescent, North Vancouver; G. C. Crompton, St. Catharines, Ont.; Robert Brownell, Riverside, Ont.

Clarence LeBlanc, Packton, N.B., father of nine children. No Canadians held Irish sweep tickets on Royal Tan, in third place.

Three Canadians won major prizes in the Quebec Army and Navy Sweepstake on the Grand National—C. C. Sernatowicz, of Montreal, $18,600; A. R. Cochran, Port Arthur, $11,200, and H. Sanfilippo, 381 Fruby Street, Winnipeg, $7,500.

When interviewed at 8 a.m., 30 minutes after the race—Mr. Whiteoak was still in a state of nervous shock, and without plans to spend his money. He was waiting by the telephone for official word from the Irish sweep headquarters in Dublin.

His hands trembled as he raised a cigarette to his lips while being questioned.

A Victorian by birth, Mr. Whiteoak has bought sweep tickets "off and on" for the past 20 years. This is his first win.

His ticket, CCS-18726, carried the pseudonym "Weed."

Asked of his sister's reaction to the win, Mr. Whiteoak said:

"She's pretty excited about it all."

"And your mother?"

"Mother's pretty excited, too," he smiled shyly. "She's not up yet," he added.

The shipyard worker went to school at the Normal when it was a model school, then attended Mount Douglas High.

In Second World War he served in the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals four years and nine months.

He has two married sisters in Victoria: Mrs. Jack Carou, 1827 Newton, and Mrs. Arthur Holland, 1845 Kings. A third sister, Mrs. William Thompson, lives in St. Andrews, N.B.

point of congratulating one another when Loch Devon fell.

Their elation turned instantly to dismay. The Queen Mother slowly lowered her glasses, turned to her daughters with a faint smile and shrugged her shoulders.

Bought for $3.50 From Pal

Mr. Whiteoak's winning ticket was bought for $3.50 from a fellow-worker at Yarrow's.

Most of his shipyard friends today are as excited as he is.

"Good for Horace! Gee, that's wonderful," said James Hermiton, electrical superintendent at the yard.

"Horace is a very steady chap; he's been looking after his mother. He's well-liked in the shop and a good workman."

Johnny McAllister, electrician charge hand at Yarrow's, where Mr. Whiteoak has worked for the past five years, described today's news as an anticlimax.

"Horace has been nervous for the last four days, since he learned his horse would run. This is only an aftermath."

PRAYER FOR TODAY

OPEN OUR EYES, O GOD, in this, the most beautiful season of the year, to see Thy goodness. Open our ears to hear Thy voice through the beauty that surrounds us.

Open our hearts to the call of those not so fortunate. And strengthen our arms so that we may lift those who stumble. Through Jesus Christ. Amen.

Woman Hypnotist Defends Powers

Can Cure Disease, Alcoholism
Says Court-Banned Spell-Caster

By PETER MATTHEWS

Madame Dorothy Westlake, the Vancouver hypnotist who is said to have been hired to hypnotize a Victoria woman into returning to her divorced husband, believes most human ills can be cured by hypnotic treatment.

MRS. HELEN COOPER
... subject of hypnotism

"I believe all disease can be controlled by the mind," she told The Times from her home at 2560 West Broadway, Vancouver, today.

Mrs. Westlake advertises herself as "Canada's leading lady hypnotist." She has set up in practice as a consultant and claims to have cured "many, many people" of alcoholism, insomnia, stuttering and all kinds of nervous disorders.

Madame Westlake, an Englishwoman, refused to discuss Friday's Supreme Court action in which 23-year-old Mrs. Helen Emma Cooper of 887 Copper Avenue, Victoria, was granted an injunction to restrain her former husband, Thomas Amiel Cooper, and Madame Westlake from "interfering" with her.

Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson granted the injunction after Mrs. Cooper filed an affidavit stating that she was hypnotized by Madame Westlake in a room at the Empress Hotel.

"Mr. Cooper's lawyers have asked me to make no reference to this case," Madame Westlake said. "Further litigation is pending."

Speaking in a low-toned musical voice, Madame Westlake told how she first became interested in hypnotism as a young girl in England.

"I knew a number of spiritualists," she said, "and they told me I was a natural medium. From there I moved to the study of hypnosis and the more I practised it the more I am convinced it is a cure for most of the world's ills today."

Oil Slick Studied In Hunt for Plane

Upper Campbell Lake Area Also Scoured
After Loggers Report Treetops Sheared

VANCOUVER (BUP)—Samples of an oil slick found floating in British Columbia's Georgia Strait near where an RCAF T-33 jet trainer is believed to have crashed Thursday will be analyzed today to determine if it came from the jet.

Officials of the RCAF's search and rescue division began arrangements this morning for a two-part sample of mixed sea water and oil to be analyzed by senior chemist G. C. Wilkinson of the Shell Oil Co.

Rumors of a possible crash in the Upper Campbell Lake area also were being checked today by both air and ground searches.

Reports of loggers in the vicinity hearing a "swish" and of seeing 60-foot trees with the top three or four feet broken, prompted the Campbell River Ground Observer Corps to send a party to the area on foot.

These are the last remaining clues of many reported since the search started at noon Thursday. Dense fog and cloud continue to hamper the operation, in which 500 men are taking part.

Reports Friday of an aircraft wing being sighted in water south of Campbell River proved to be false.

Aboard the plane for a routine training flight from Comox air base were FO James E. Miller, 23, formerly of Victoria, and FO Gerald Stubbs, 32, formerly of Winnipeg. Both lived at Comox with their families.

Vancouver Widow Gets $140,000 In Sweepstakes

The history of the Grand National and the remarkable woman who stages it are told in a special article in Weekend Magazine in this issue today.

The most fantastic finish in the history of England's famed Grand National Steeplechase today poured $56,000—every penny free of income taxes—into the pockets of Saanich shipyard worker Horace Whiteoak, 3795 Cedar Hill Road.

The Queen Mother's horse, Devon Loch, fell with victory in sight, 50 yards from the winning post, Gentle Moya, on which Mr. Whiteoak held an Irish Sweep ticket, roared from fifth place to second in the last 50 yards of the race.

The drama in the home-stretch spelled the difference to the Yarrow's electrician between $1,400 for an "also ran" and $56,000 in second-place winnings.

Winner of the race was E.S.B. Royal Tan was third.

E.S.B.'s victory brought $140,000 in Irish Sweep money to a 43-year-old Vancouver widow, Mrs. Helen Orsloets, 3387 East 28th Ave. She is a dishwasher in Hudson's Bay Company store's staff restaurant.
